Program notes

Revolution begets counter-revolution. Civil war spawns political mistrust and bipartisan betrayal. What nation ever discovers a lasting democratic panacea when inequality, poverty, illiteracy and discrimination still abound? Each generation in its turn has raised the call for radical change. It is the order of things to provoke change. Responding to the disillusionment of a sixties generation, Peter Weiss' play Marat/Sade, or by its full title of The Persecution of Jean Paul Marat as Performed by the Inmates of the Asylum of Charenton under the direction of the Marquis de Sade, drew attention to a world gripped in the throes of a Cold war with Russia, a persistent threat of nuclear war, the presence of America in Vietnam and an increasing gap between employed and unemployed. In England, anarchy simmered beneath the surface. Censorship was still under government control. The status quo was more vulnerable than ever for attack. A new voice was heard in the theatre. Playwrights dismantled arcane political taboos and emerged as voices of dissent seeking honesty. In 1964 the Royal Shakespeare Company's production of Marat/Sade was immediately mired in controversy as one of its own Executive Board members attempted to have the play banned. Public opinion stood resolutely on the side of freedom of artistic expression and the play opened to tumultuous acclaim. In considering the play, and its importance in society today, it is impossible not to see the irony of the 21st Century. Wealth and security, advanced technology and affordable education for the masses, and yet we witness each day a progression of civil war and unrest across the globe. Both the original Schillertheater production and the RSC productions of Marat/Sade in 1964 aimed at causing audience discomfort. The time had arrived for playwrights to seize the moment, and, like Marat himself, deliver a stark wake-up call to those who remained anesthetized within the comfortable euphoria of a bourgeois lifestyle. Little surprise that the play Marat/Sade receives few productions in commercial theatres today. Theatre has mandated to either hold a mirror up to nature or create false entertainment that eases the pain of living. A tough choice. We know which one receives funding. Every good reason why universities should continue to keep the voice of playwrights such as Peter Weiss alive while training all eyes on the truth that still surround us!

Jacques Roux: radical priest and leader of the ENRAGÈS, the most militant grouping of the revolutionary masses. Critical of the more moderate JACOBINS, befriended MARAT but later turned against him.

Sans culottes: revolutionary masses; the name refers to the type of pants worn by the lower classes.

Section: during the Revolution the quarters of Paris were organized in Sections.

This production of Marat/Sade is dedicated to PD.
Glossary

Das: Laurent Bas, collaborator of Marat.
Caen: city in the Calvados department. After their removal from power (June 2, 1793) a number of GIRONDISTS, among them Barbaroux and Buzot fled to Caen and made it their center of resistance and conspiracy against the Jacobin radicals.
Carmagnole: short vest worn during the revolutionary period; dance of the revolutionary period; song accompanying the dance.
Convention: National Convention, revolutionary parliament that replaced the Legislative Assembly on September 21, 1792. It proclaimed the republic and governed France until October 26, 1795.
Corday, Charlotte: Marie Anne Charlotte de Corday d'Armont (1768-93), descendant from Norman nobility, related to Corneille. Politically well-informed and active in the GIRONDIST movement. In response to the removal from power of the Girondists and the accedence of the JACOBSINS she murdered MARAT in his bathtub on July 13, 1793. She was guillotined on July 17, 1793.
Damiens: Robert François Damiens (1715-57), attempted to murder Louis XV. on January 5, 1757, and was executed on March 28. Weiss's description of Damien's execution is based almost verbatim on historical documents.
Danton: Georges Jacques Danton (1759-94), lawyer, member of the JACOBSINS and their most popular orator. Together with ROBESPIERRE led the fight against the rightist GIRONDISTS as well as against the extreme left (Hébertists and ENRAGES). Turned against Robespierre's radicalization of the Revolution and was guillotined.
Directoire: government of France from the 4th Brumaire of the year IV (October 26, 1795) to the 18th Brumaire of the year VIII (November 9, 1799).
Duperret: Claude Romain Lauze de Perret (1747-93), GIRONDIST delegate to the CONVENTION. Guillotined after the removal from power of the Girondists.
Enrages: the most radical faction of the SANS CULOTTES.
Fourth Estate: working masses below the bourgeoisie. The term was coined in the mid-nineteenth century in analogy to the original three estates: the nobility, the clergy, and the rest of the population.
Girondists: political movement of the bourgeoisie during the French revolution, named after the Gironde department, where many of its leaders came from. Acceded to power in the CONVENTION in 1792, where they represented the right. Soon clashed with the more radical JACOBSINS (among whose leaders were MARAT, DANTON and ROBESPIERRE). The Girondists were removed from power on June 2, 1793. Following the murder of Marat on July 13, 1793, by the Girondist Charlotte CORDAY she herself as well as 21 Girondists were executed.
Incroyable: eccentric and dandyish young man during the period of the DIRECTOIRE.

The FIU Theatre and Dance Department

The Theatre program offers two degrees: a Bachelor of Arts (BA) and a Bachelor of Fine Arts (BFA). The program is ideal in size, large enough to be able to offer a wide range of courses taught by varied, well-qualified faculty and to support an active production program, yet small enough that every student receives personal attention.

The Theatre and Dance Department has an active production program. We currently present four faculty directed theatre productions a year and one Dance Concert including choreography by FIU Dance faculty and guest choreographers. In addition to the faculty directed and choreographed productions, there are student produced shows, presented by “Showcase Players”, the student organization.

The Herbert and Nicole Wertheim Performing Arts Center includes a beautiful 250-seat proscenium theatre, a large black box Studio Theatre, costume shop, scene shop, 2 dressing rooms, a green room, and also houses the School of Music.

If you are interested in learning more about the program or becoming a theatre major, please call or write for more information.
