A NOTE FROM THE DIRECTOR

Great fiction is deemed great because it contains, not one central theme but many accompanying issues with which the reader can identify. The same is true of theatre literature and none standing so eminent in greatness as Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream". The dramatic plot is peppered with confounding twists and turns as the characters are swept from reason and rationality to a comical state of bewildered irrationality. However, in an attempt to bring the play closer to the relevancy of today's disturbing weather patterns and burgeoning urban landscapes this production has chosen to explore the importance of "balance" in life, both the spiritual and temporal incarnations.

As with nature itself, our own lives are affected by the imbalance brought about by a sense of loss. A great deal of loss is experienced in the play; Egeus loses his daughter Hermia, Demetrius loses Helena, Hermia loses Lysander, the Mechanicals lose Bottom, Theseus loses the trust of Hippolyta who, early in the play, has reason to doubt her decision to marry a seemingly egocentric State Attorney, and Oberon loses Titania in the conflict over child-custody. The balance of Yin and Yang in a relationship plays a far more critical role in our personal wellbeing than any solitary relationship we can have with ourselves. "No man is an island" and it would seem that we have been put together, not only for our own personal survival but to help others survive the same conditions. Outward perceptions and the opinion of others still matter more than the opinions we hold about our own self. As much as one would like to argue the point and depend solely on our own self-evaluation we crave an "other" to help confirm who we are.

The play begins with the imbalance of nature, caused by a domestic war between the super powers of nature, Oberon and Titania. They command the world of natural forces. Ironically, they also mirror human behavior, and, prompted by their inability to compromise over the custody of the Indian child, Titania concedes in her famous speech outlining the tragic destruction taking place on earth that, "We are their parents and originals." It is as if she is telling us today that by our insatiable need to possess more land and create more industry and use more energy the imbalance of nature has resulted in the chaos of altered seasons that we have only just begun to experience. The center cannot hold. The balance of things cannot be maintained. Yet everything is happily resolved in "A Midsummer Night's Dream".....or is it? Political and social balance are seemingly restored between family, friends and lovers, and Shakespeare sends us out into the world, reassured that things that seem chaotic and contrary can be restored to harmony. Only Puck, that indefatigable force of energy, reminds us that perhaps our idea of balance and harmony was, after all, nothing more than a dream.....during a midsummer's night.

The Kennedy Center American College Theater Festival XXXVIII

Presented and Produced by
The John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts
Supported in Part by
The U.S. Department of Education
Dr. and Mrs. Gerald McNichols
The Laura Pels International Foundation
The Kennedy Center Corporate Fund
The National Committee for the Performing Arts.

This production is entered in the Kennedy Center American College Theater Festival (KCACTF). The aims of this national theater education program are to identify and promote quality in college-level theater production. To this end, each production entered is eligible for a response by a regional KCACTF representative, and selected students and faculty are invited to participate in KCACTF programs involving scholarships, internships, grants and awards for actors, playwrights, designers, stage managers and critics at both the regional and national levels.

Productions entered on the Participating level are eligible for inclusion at the KCACTF regional festival and can also be considered for invitation to the KCACTF national festival at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, DC in the spring of 2006.

Last year more than 1,400 productions were entered in the KCACTF involving more than 200,000 students nationwide. By entering this production, our theater department is sharing in the KCACTF goals to recognize, reward, and celebrate the exemplary work produced in college and university theaters across the nation.
