

Jane Bayes is a Professor of Political Science and Director of the Institute of Gender, Globalization, and Democracy at California State University, Northridge. She also is the Director of the International Social Science Council's Research Programme on Gender, Globalization and Democratization (ISSC-GGD). Her teaching and research interests are in the areas of women and politics, political economy, and globalization and gender. She is a co-author of Women, Democracy and Globalization in North America (Palgrave, 2006) and co-editor of Globalization, Gender, and Religion; The Politics of Implementing Women's Rights in Catholic and Muslim Contexts (St. Martins Press, 2001); Gender, Globalization and Democratization (Rowman and Littlefield 2001) and Comparable Worth, Pay Equity and Public Policy. (N.Y: Greenwood Press, 1988.) Her other books include Minority Politics and Ideologies in the United States and Ideologies and Interest Group Politics (both Chandler and Sharp 1982).