

3-4-2011

Post-Genocide Rwanda: The challenges for a post-ethnic civil society and the potentialities for good governance

Fiacre Bienvenu

African & African Diaspora Studies Program, Florida International University

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.fiu.edu/africana_student_pres

Recommended Citation

Bienvenu, Fiacre, "Post-Genocide Rwanda: The challenges for a post-ethnic civil society and the potentialities for good governance" (2011). African & African Diaspora Studies Program Graduate Student Scholarly Presentations. 10.
https://digitalcommons.fiu.edu/africana_student_pres/10

This work is brought to you for free and open access by the African and African Diaspora Studies at FIU Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in African & African Diaspora Studies Program Graduate Student Scholarly Presentations by an authorized administrator of FIU Digital Commons. For more information, please contact dcc@fiu.edu.

Post-Genocide Rwanda:
The challenges for a post-ethnic civil society and the potentialities for good governance

March 4-5, 2011

By: Fiacre Bienvenu
Graduate Student
African & African Diaspora Studies

Why take interest?

- Is of great interest in contemporary world.
 - E.g. used by global institutions (WB, UN, etc.) to measure performance of governance and so to determine donations to countries;
- Substantial funding flows across Africa in CS:
 - Bilateral Govts. and Private Corporates, e.g. Ford Foundation, Rockefeller Foundation, etc.);
- Limited academic studies specific to Rwandan civil society

Theoretical background

Faith in Civil Society?

- Evaluates (as accountability tool for) political institutions
- Is conducive to transition from authoritarianism to political democracy
- Shapes good governance
- Creates civil participation in public policy formation processes

Bibic and Grazino 1994, Mafunisa 2004

Critical of Civil Society?

- Represents a future world political order and suppresses nation-state orientation
- Replaces community identity given the reality of limitless global CS (focusing on political groupings and associations)
- Aims to “reconstruct, re-imagine, or remap world politics”

Lipschutz 1992, Baker 2002

Apolitical, community-evolved, and independent institutions to bridge constituencies and government; and promote their interests in policy formation & service delivery.

A brief history of CS in Rwanda

Pre-Genocide:

- Social fabric of Rwanda is not a set of dispersed and unconnected homes. It is made up of local communities:
 - i.e. spheres of collective memory and creation of consensus.
 - Families react with a 'community spirit', when facing external interventions or local tensions

A brief history of civil society in Rwanda (Next)

Post-Genocide:

- Genocide, war, and refugee movements:
 - have profoundly perturbed the social fabric,
 - destroyed old community networks and ‘trust’ in them
 - paralyzed (in immediate effects) their ability to act in face of common adversity.

A brief history of civil society in Rwanda (TODAY)

- Strong organizational structure at national level:
 - National CS platform unit (overseeing +50 umbrella entities)
 - Over 300 associations enrolled under the MINALOC
- Mostly, CS confused with Media, Private Sector, Cooperatives, and other parastatal institutions
- Kaiser & Wafula said CS has failed in EA region due to genocide, and mass movements of people in the region.

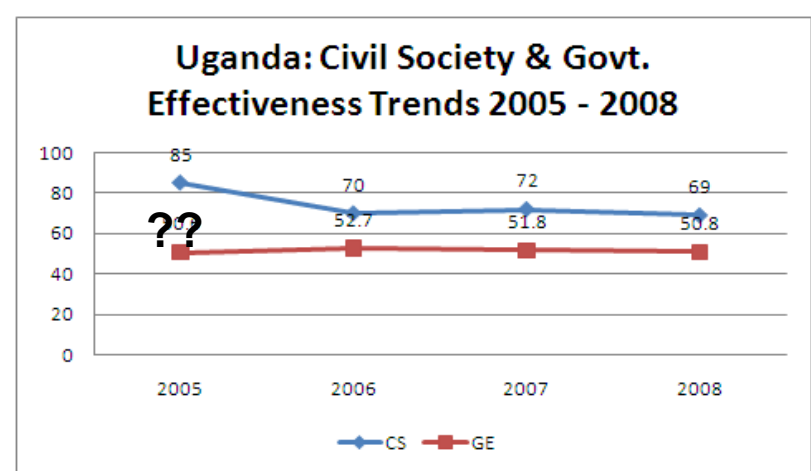

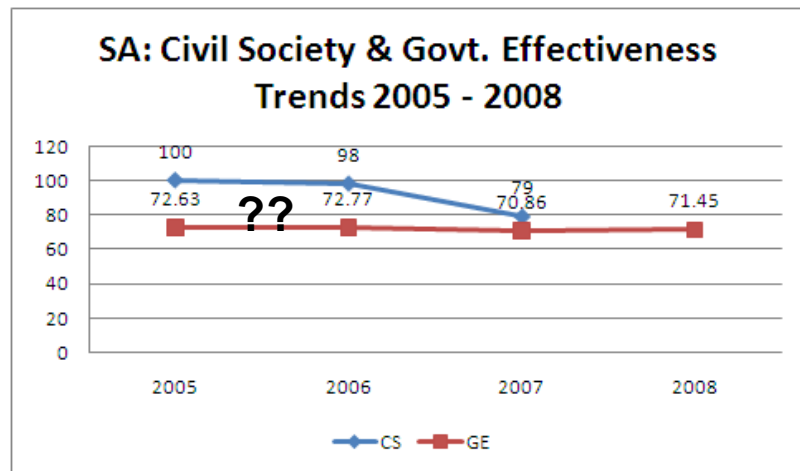

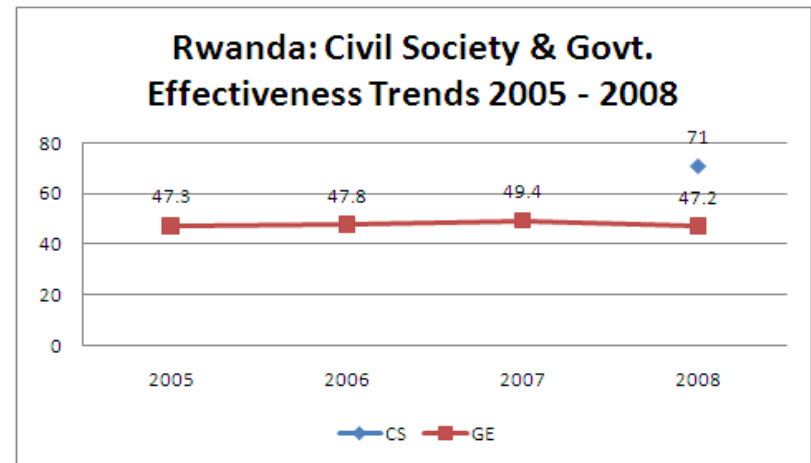

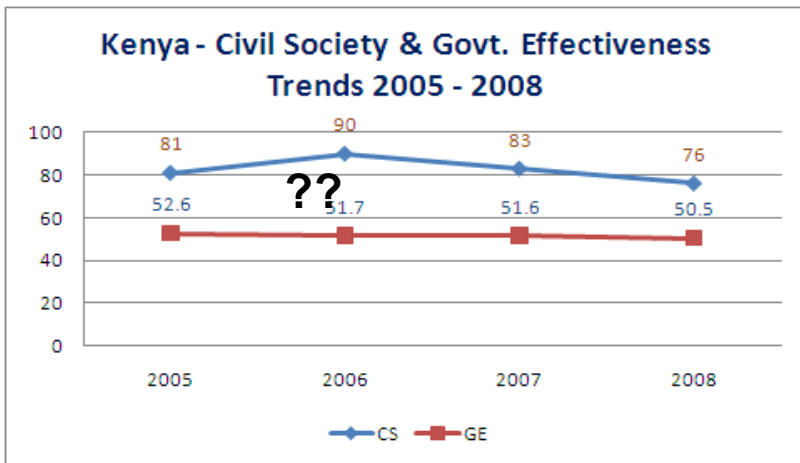

Building CS in Rwanda: the role of international organizations

- Strength of civil society is marker of good governance for private donors and for WB, UN, other Multi-lateral institutions:
 - E.g. Substantial funding flows from USG, Norway, Sweden govts (MCC/USAID, Urban Institute, PIMA, SIDA, CARE, etc.)
 - Most support is institutional & technical capacity building

Connect with the traditional
'communitarism'?

Trends connecting civil society and good governance

SOURCE: — Global Integrity; — Mo Ibrahim Foundation

Problematizing current CS in Rwanda

Re-potentialities for success of CS enforced in Rwanda:

- Is there all capacity to produce sustainable results despite massive funding & current GoR's political will?
- Will “community agency” prioritize CS over community resilience and public safety values?
- Can CS virtues work better even in an environment sensitive to ethnicity and bad history? (e.g. Total Freedom vs public safety)
- Is CS contributing to reconciliation and unity?

Research question

In post-genocide Rwanda, can this “transnational” civil society create good governance?

Initial Conclusion

- CS being proposed is too rigorous for Rwanda to create quickly aspired results
- Conceptual framework of CS being employed in Rwanda will create unintended results due to that:
 - is inauthentic (grassroots driven, fully independent, representing genuine constituencies)
 - Is transnational driven (fully external funding, and little in context of local state-society relations)
 - State-captured (coopted)
 - Is within Rwandan exceptionalism (ideological, and history)

A stylized map of Kenya with a white border. The map is filled with the colors of the Kenyan flag: blue at the top, yellow in the middle, and green at the bottom. A yellow sun with rays is positioned in the upper right quadrant of the map.

Murakoze!

Thank you!