Nieman Barnes is an Associate Professor of Sociology at California State University Long Beach. Her areas of expertise include Health Disparities, Immigration, the AIDS epidemic, Non-profit Organizations and the Voluntary Sector, Transnational Networks and Social Movements and Community-Based Research Methods.

Currently, Dr. Barnes is researching how transnational and local activists shape the convergence of migrant and immigrant health policies and service programs in North America. Past research projects include investigating how AIDS organizations in Mexico use transnational networks to impact policy and solve health service disparities, and Rapid Assessment and Response Evaluations of HIV/AIDS risk in Latino, Black and Transgender populations. Dr. Barnes has received research awards from the Canadian Embassy, the US Fulbright Commission, and the Ford Foundation. Recent publications include:

Email: nbarnes@csulb.edu