Background

The Cypress Creek Livability Study Area extends over six municipalities: Fort Lauderdale, Pompano Beach, Oakland Park, Lauderdale-By-The-Sea, Sea Ranch Lakes, and Tamarac.

City	Livability Study Area	Percent of the city's area within the Livability Study Area
Ft. Lauderdale	35%	30%
Pompano Beach	30%	40%
Oakland Park	20%	80%
Lauderdale-By-The-Sea	8%	90%
Sea Ranch Lakes	5%	100%
Tamarac	2%	90%

The municipalities within the Livability Study Area vary greatly-- from Fort Lauderdale, the county's seat and principal city, to the Village of Sea Ranch Lakes, a tiny, exclusive gated community that functions as an autonomous city. Below is a brief description of each of the municipalities:

The City of Fort Lauderdale emerged as the county's principal city and became the county seat of Broward County in 1915.¹ Today the City of Fort Lauderdale is the largest municipality in Broward County and is the seventh largest city in Florida, with a population of 184,892 in 2009.² Approximately 30 percent of the city falls within the Livability Study Area. The Fort Lauderdale City Commission has endorsed a plan for a $110 million water park within the livability area around Fort Lauderdale's Lockhart Stadium, an 18,500-seat facility. The nearby Fort Lauderdale Stadium would be incorporated into the park to create a sports village.³ The plan includes a permanent home for the Broward County Sports Hall of Fame, as well as virtual golf, baseball and softball simulators.⁴ The economic impact of the project is estimated at $400 million.⁵

The City of Pompano Beach was originally settled by both Black and White families from northern Florida, Georgia and the Carolinas, as well as a number of Black immigrants from the Bahamas.⁶ One hundred years later, the city's racial makeup is still predominantly White and Black residents, with a growing number of immigrants--this time Hispanic and Brazilian.⁷ In 2009 Pompano Beach's population was 102,609.⁸ Also worth noting is the substantial seasonal population that spends its winters in the area. Approximately 40 percent of the city falls within the Livability Study Area. The city's efforts to increase tourism within this area led to one of the county's newest casinos, Isles Casino and Racing at Pompano Park, opened in 2007. The city has another horse racing venue at the Pompano Harness Track, also located within the Livability Study Area.⁹

The City of Oakland Park was in the midst of a transformation from a sleepy southern community to a more modern city prior to the downturn in the economy. This change has been credited to spillover in redevelopment from its neighbor to the south, Wilton Manors.¹⁰ Many of the changes in Oakland Park have brought about tensions between the city's original blue-collar community and its new residents, resulting in growing pains in recent years.¹¹ In 2009 the City of Oakland Park had 42,565 residents.¹² Approximately 80 percent of the city falls within the Livability Study Area.

The Town of Lauderdale-By-The-Sea is a small municipality with a population of 5,877.¹³ While numerous other coastal cities in Florida allowed the development of large condominium complexes on the beach, Lauderdale-By-The-Sea takes pride in its small-town charm and ocean views protected by building height limitations.¹⁴ Ninety percent of the town falls within the Livability Study Area.

The Village of Sea Ranch Lakes is a gated seaside village with a population of only 741.¹⁵ The tiny municipality is made up of an exclusive walled residential area, an oceanfront beach club, and one shopping plaza.¹⁶ The Village of Sea Ranch Lakes is unique in that all property within its jurisdiction is private land. Thus, the Sea Ranch Lakes Police Department is legally allowed to deny access to residential areas of the village to non-residents through the village's main gate on Gatehouse Rd at A1A.¹⁷ Security is a priority for the village residents. Walls eight to fourteen feet high enclose an enclave that is also protected by a 21-person police force guarding the .14-square-mile community.¹⁸ It should be noted that 100 percent of the village is located within the Livability Study Area.

The City of Tamarac has evolved from a retirement community of snowbirds to a diverse city with a population of 59,655.¹⁹ One of the greatest changes has been in senior-citizen population. Twenty years ago the U.S. Census reported that the average age in the city had decreased a little over 10 years.²⁰ Despite the change, the city's median age remains higher than the county's. Currently the city's median age is 47, whereas the county's median age is 38.²¹ Furthermore, recent data shows that the city's population is expected to increase in the older age groups through 2013.²² Regardless, the demographic shift can create community tensions. According to the Sun-Sentinel, the mix of young and old has been the source of neighborhood clashes as young families move into homes in neighborhoods once limited to seniors only.²³ Ninety percent of the city falls within the Livability Study Area.

Demographic, Housing & Economic Indicators²⁴

The following section describes the demographic profile of the Livability Study Area and provides a few key housing and economic indicators.²⁵

The Cypress Creek Livability Study Area's total population was 131,002 in 2009. Significant growth occurred within the Livability Study Area between 1990 and 2000, however, the population has since remained flat and is projected to decline slightly by 2014. The average median age in the Livability Study Area is 43 and is expected to increase to 44 by 2014.

The majority of the Cypress Creek Livability Study Area’s population is White (75.52 percent), native born (75.07 percent), and speaks English (73.38 percent); the population’s makeup is projected to remain about the same through 2014. The Hispanic population is expected to increase from 16.90 percent in 2009 to 19.01 percent in 2014.

The Cypress Creek Livability Study Area’s average household size is 1.5. In 2009 the area had approximately 74,975 housing units, of which 83.49 percent were occupied, mostly by homeowners (53.59 percent). It is hard to know how much of the vacancy rate (16.51 percent) can be explained by the seasonal population in seaside cities such as Pompano Beach.

In 2009 the Cypress Livability Study Area had an average household income of $62,917.55 and experienced a 10.04 percent unemployment rate. Of those residents that are employed, the majority (13.15 percent) work in the professional, scientific, management, and administrative sectors. The Cypress Creek Livability Study Area is also home to numerous large employers: ²⁶
