Mission

The Community Literacy Journal is an interdisciplinary journal that publishes both scholarly work that contributes to theories, methodologies, and research agendas and work by literacy workers, practitioners, and community literacy program staff. We are especially committed to presenting work done in collaboration between academics and community members, organizers, activists, teachers, and artists.

We understand “community literacy” as including multiple domains for literacy work extending beyond mainstream educational and work institutions. It can be found in programs devoted to adult education, early childhood education, reading initiatives, or work with marginalized populations. It can also be found in more informal, ad hoc projects, including creative writing, graffiti art, protest songwriting, and social media campaigns.

For us, literacy is defined as the realm where attention is paid not just to content or to knowledge but to the symbolic means by which it is represented and used. Thus, literacy makes reference not just to letters and to text but to other multimodal, technological, and embodied representations, as well. Community literacy is interdisciplinary and intersectional in nature, drawing from rhetoric and composition, communication, literacy studies, English studies, gender studies, race and ethnic studies, environmental studies, critical theory, linguistics, cultural studies, education, and more.

Cover Art

Ella Hepner is a recent graduate of Carnegie Mellon University, where she received an interdisciplinary degree in Global Studies, Hispanic Studies, and Fine Arts. She is based part time in Pittsburgh, PA, and part in Havana, Cuba.

Someone looked at Ella Hepner's work and said it reminded them of being at the public pool on a summer day. You step out on the hot concrete, and little pockets of steam rise up from under your feet. And the pool is right there, the relief, but you're not in it yet.

That feeling of tension, of knowing and anticipating a sensation yet not being able to access it, is what Hepner brings across in her art. It roams between intimacy and space, the raw and erotic, invention and memory. It moonlights as reality when really it is fantasy. With paint or ink and a variety of kitchen utensils, the work is half mistake, half intention, and completely idealized; stealing moves from Goya to Dutch masters to Peter Doig; focusing on touch, suggesting things left behind, things caressed, human contact, often with food as organic, soft and seductive—like the human body.

The cover art, "La Segunda Fiesta de Angelito" (Angelito's Second Party) is taken from a family party in Havana, Cuba. Conversation and argument are two of the strongest symbols of communication, which celebrate coming together. You argue most within your communities. The drawing shows a scene of reunion in a society of storytellers competing to hold forth in the conversation. The arguing is festive.

Submissions

Submissions for the articles section of the journal should clearly demonstrate engagement with community literacy scholarship, particularly scholarship previously published in the Community Literacy Journal. The editors seek work that pushes the field forward in exciting and perhaps unexpected ways. Case studies, qualitative and/or quantitative research, conceptual articles, etc., ranging from 20-25 manuscript pages, are welcome. If deemed appropriate, we will send the manuscript out to readers for blind review. You can expect a report in 8-10 weeks.

The CLJ also welcomes shorter manuscripts (8-12 pages) for two new sections:

Community Literacy Project and Program Profiles will discuss innovative and impactful community-based projects and programs that are grounded in best practices. We encourage community-based practitioners and non-profit staff to submit for this section. Profiles should draw on community literacy scholarship, but they are not expected to have the extended lit reviews that are customary in the articles section of the journal. If you are a community member wanting to submit, and it is your first time writing for an academic journal, we are happy to offer mentorship and answer questions. Pieces co-authored by multiple stakeholders in a project are also welcome.

Please submit using our online submission system. Contact the Project and Program Profiles Editor, Vincent Portillo, with questions at vportill@syr.edu.

Issues in Community Literacy will offer targeted analysis, reflection, and/or complication of ongoing challenges associated with the work of community literacy. Potential subjects for this section include (but are not limited to): building/sustaining infrastructure, navigating institutional constraints, pursuing community literacy in graduate school, working with vulnerable populations, building ethical relationships, realizing reciprocity, and negotiating conflicts among partners. We imagine this as a space for practitioners to raise critical issues or offer a response to an issue raised in a previous volume of the CLJ.

We encourage community-based practitioners and non-profit staff to submit for this section.
