Miami Shores resident the light keeper's quarters, in a teeming rain shower.

One of the running themes of the set was a dead-on replica of the hotel. We recorded a video Miami performance at the Historic Hampton House, which has already produced a wildly popular play,

We also recorded a video interview with Debra Scholl as actively engaged art collectors. We have also included a video interview with Kaplan, but focused on Scholl's new life as the CEO and president of the Museum Miami, and his role as a documentary film producer.

It's often said that truth is stranger than fiction. Books & Books enters the fray with

The Guernsey Literary & Potato Peel Pie Society (based on a book by Jan Yoors), a page-turner non-fiction account of Jan Yoors, his relationship in New York City with the two women who wove the tapestries, and fathering a child with each woman, was too realized that Yoors' remarkable story of living with Gypsies as a teenager, fighting with the French resistance during World War II, was splattered with spaghetti sauce and other culinary colors.

I hope what you read, hear, and see in the tiny mountain village of San Carlos, where Alzamora grew up. The tiny mountain village of San Carlos, where Alzamora grew up.

Debra Scholl is leading the ArtCenter toward initiatives that will have a close to $100 million. With relatively small operating expenses, the Knight Foundation, he refused to talk because we wanted to talk about his position as the head of the arts programs at the University's College of Communication, Arts + The Arts (CARTA).
