

9-10-2012

Assimilation or Transnationalism? Evidence from the Latino National Survey for Mexicans, Puerto Ricans, Cubans, and South Americans who Immigrated to the USA from 1958 to 2005

Cuban Research Institute, Florida International University

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.fiu.edu/cri_events

 Part of the Latin American Studies Commons

Recommended Citation

Cuban Research Institute, Florida International University, "Assimilation or Transnationalism? Evidence from the Latino National Survey for Mexicans, Puerto Ricans, Cubans, and South Americans who Immigrated to the USA from 1958 to 2005" (2012). Cuban Research Institute Events. 238.

https://digitalcommons.fiu.edu/cri_events/238

This work is brought to you for free and open access by the Cuban Research Institute at FIU Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Cuban Research Institute Events by an authorized administrator of FIU Digital Commons. For more information, please contact dcc@fiu.edu.

Assimilation or Transnationalism?

Evidence from the Latino National Survey for Mexicans, Puerto Ricans, Cubans, and South Americans who Immigrated to the USA from 1958 to 2005

Lecture by Silvia Pedraza

September 10, 2012 | 12:00 PM | FIU Modesto A. Maidique Campus | DM 353

A major issue in the study of immigrants is whether or not they assimilate to American society, particularly at this time when it is clear that modern communications enable immigrants to communicate with their homelands as never before. In this research, Professor Silvia Pedraza compares and contrasts four groups of immigrants from Latin America (Mexico, Puerto Rico, Cuba, and South America) to the US over the course of half a century to examine with data from the Latino National Survey (2006) to what extent they assimilate or are engaged in transnational behavior.

Silvia Pedraza is Professor of Sociology and American Culture at the University of Michigan. She holds a B.A. from the University of Michigan and a Ph.D. in Sociology from the University of Chicago. Her research interests include the sociology of immigration, race and ethnicity in America, and the sociology of Cuba's revolution and exodus. She is author of three books and numerous articles.

Event is free and open to the public. Light refreshments will be served. For additional information and to RSVP call (305)348-2894.

Event is part of the CRI Lunchtime Lecture Series

Co-Sponsored by the Latin American and Caribbean Center at FIU and the Department of Global & Sociocultural Studies at FIU