Where is Cuba Going? A European Perspective

Lecture by Dr. Jacques Rupnik

Centre de Recherches Internationales (CERI) at Sciences Po, Paris

Tuesday, April 19, 2016 | 2:00 PM - 3:15 PM | FIU Modesto A. Maidique Campus | SIPA Café

Dr. Jacques Rupnik is a visiting scholar at Harvard's Center for European Research, as well as director of research at the Centre de Recherches Internationales (CERI) at Sciences Po, Paris, where he also serves as professor of political science. In addition, he is a visiting professor at the College of Europe in Bruges, Belgium. Dr. Rupnik was an advisor to Václav Havel and is currently a member of the scientific council of the Prague Institute of International Relations, the Institute for Historical Justice and Reconciliation in The Hague and the International Forum for Democracy Studies in Washington, D.C.

Themes to be explored include:

- Democratic transitions and their common elements
- Case studies of democratic transitions as unique occurrences
- How to unleash the "power of the powerless"
- Relevance of the Havel "legacy" for today's Cuba
- Role of international solidarity in democratic transition - can it make a difference?
