Our military overseas to fight an enemy that is willing to hurt us all without remorse or hesitation. Our military and intelligence community is basically utilizing a combination of containment and deterrence to keep us safe. They have managed to keep us terror-free within our borders since Sept. 11, 2001 and have managed to keep the terrorist running around in the other side of the world, creating a shield for us to enjoy.

Please remember to vote and to encourage your friends and family to do so. We live in a great nation of dreams and realities. It is a dream to think that we can fight terrorism within our borders. The reality is that we are better protected by fighting the enemy where they live and train. This is not a popular policy as we are sending our military overseas to fight an enemy that is willing to hurt us all without remorse or hesitation. Our military and intelligence community is basically utilizing a combination of containment and deterrence to keep us safe.

The presidential election of 2004 will be one of the most important elections in the new world of technology and international terrorism. Issues like homeland security and the draft will play a major role in the votes of many. For students, I think that this election may be the most crucial as they are the foundation for many things to come.

Homeland security is important, because, without it, people will revert to living in a state of disbelief and constant fear. As we have learned, we have reached a sense of security by engaging the enemy head-on where they live and train. Amendment 1

Section 22. Parental notice of termination of a minor's pregnancy. The legislature shall not limit or deny the privacy guaranteed to a minor under the United States Constitution as interpreted by the United States Supreme Court. Notwithstanding a minor's right of privacy provided in Section 23 of Article I, the Legislature is authorized to require by general law for notification to a parent or guardian of a minor before the termination of the minor's pregnancy. The Legislature shall provide exceptions to such requirement for notification and shall create a process for judicial waiver of the notification.

Amendment 2

Constitutional Amendments Proposed By Initiative. Proposing amendments to the State Constitution to require the sponsor of a constitutional amendment proposed by citizen initiative to file the initiative petitions with the Secretary of State by February 1 of the year of a general election in order to have the measure submitted to the electors for approval or rejection at the following November's general election, and to require the Florida Supreme Court to render an advisory opinion addressing the validity of an initiative petition by April 1 of the year in which the amendment is to be submitted to the electors.

Amendment 3

The Medical Liability Claimant's Compensation Amendment. Propose to amend the State Constitution to provide that an injured claimant who enters into a contingency fee agreement with an attorney in a claim for medical liability is entitled to no less than 70% of the first $250,000.00 in all damages recovered by the claimant, and 90% of damages in excess of $250,000.00, exclusive of reasonable and customary costs and regardless of the number of defendants. This amendment is intended to be self-executing.

Amendment 4

Authorizes Miami-Dade and Broward County Voters to Approve Slot Machines in Parimutuel Facilities. Authorizes Miami-Dade and Broward Counties to hold referenda on whether to authorize slot machines in existing, licensed parimutuel facilities (thoroughbred and harness racing, greyhound racing, and jai alai) that have conducted live racing or games in that county during each of the last two calendar years before effective date of this amendment. The Legislature may tax slot machine revenues, and any such taxes must supplement public education funding statewide. Requires implementing legislation. This amendment alone has no fiscal impact on government. If slot machines are authorized in Miami-Dade or Broward counties, governmental costs associated with additional gambling will increase by an unknown amount and local sales tax-related revenues will be reduced by $5 million to $8 million annually. If the Legislature also chooses to tax slot machine revenues, state tax revenues from Miami-Dade and Broward counties combined would range from $200 million to $500 million annually.

Amendment 5

Florida Minimum Wage Amendment. This amendment creates a Florida minimum wage covering all employees in the state covered by the federal minimum wage. The state minimum wage will start at $6.15 per hour six months after enactment, and thereafter be indexed to inflation each year. It provides for enforcement, including double damages for unpaid wages, attorney's fees, and fines by the state. It forbids retaliation against employees for exercising this right. The impact of this amendment on costs and revenues of state and local governments is expected to be minimal.

Amendment 6

Repeal of High Speed Rail Amendment, This amendment repeals an amendment in the Florida Constitution that requires that Legislature, the Cabinet and the Governor to proceed with the development and operation of a high speed ground transportation system by the state and/or by a private entity. The probable financial impact of passage of this amendment is a state cost savings ranging from $20 billion to $25 billion over the next 30 years. This estimate assumes the repeal of associated laws, the use of state bonds to finance construction, and could be reduced by federal or private sector funding.

Amendment 7

Patient's Right to Know About Adverse Medical Incidents. Current Florida law restricts information available to patients related to investigations of adverse medical incidents, such as medical malpractice. This amendment would give patients the right to review, upon request, records of health care facilities or providers' adverse medical incidents, including those which could cause injury or death. Provides that patients' identities should not be disclosed. The direct financial impact this amendment will have on state and local government revenues and expenditures cannot be determined, but is expected to be minimal. State agencies will incur some additional costs to comply with public records requirements of the amendment, but these costs will be generally offset by fees charged to the persons requesting the information.

Amendment 8

Public Protection from Repeated Medical Malpractice. Current law allows medical doctors who have committed repeated malpractice to be licensed to practice medicine in Florida. This amendment prohibits medical doctors who have been found to have committed three or more incidents of medical malpractice from being licensed to practice medicine in Florida. The direct financial impact on state and local governments resulting from the proposed initiative would be minimal. There will likely be additional costs to the state of less than $1 million per year, but these costs will be offset by licensure fees.

Who will rise victorious?

THE CONTENDERS: On November 2, the country will cast their votes and the future of our nation will be decided. With polls closer than ever, it appears as though this will be an extremely close election, much like the one in 2000. For many students at FIU, this will be the first voting for president. It’s as much an exciting time as it is a crucial time. No matter what age group, it is crucial that all U.S. citizens fulfill their obligatory duty to this country and vote.

Standing by the Observation Pad behind the Univiersity Park’s Chemistry and Physics building, a continuous line of students looked up at the sky, gazing through telescopes or waiting to do so.

Meanwhile, the clouds hid the moon, which over the course of the night changed from its usual white color to a light, red tone.

Witnessed the world over, the lunar eclipse of Oct. 27 drew students and members of the community to watch this special natural phenomenon through telescopes provided by the FIU Society of Physics Students.

“This turnout was fastastic,” said Eduardo Sa-pinera, a junior and president of the society. “I’m both surprised and very happy to see that so many people would take interest in this event.”

With several telescopes positioned around the platform, students got the opportunity to see the lunar eclipse up close, despite the clouds and city lights. Many brought blankets and food. Some took notebooks for classes. Others simply arrived with a curiosity for something never seen before.

“It was a really good experience. I’ve never taken astronomy classes, but I was just really interested in knowing what the whole thing was about. A lot of my friends were talking about it,” said an anthropology major.

The physics department often holds several events and lectures throughout the year about astronomy, but there is currently no astronomy department. Still, the few professors who do teach the course have a popular show in the field.

“This is an important event for everyone, not just science majors,” said James Webb, one of only three astronomy professors at the university. “It’s here that many students get their first views of Saturn, of the moon, of stars, of space, and that’s something one always remem-

Orlando Chirino, a member of the Southern Cross Astronomy Society, was also on hand to help students view the skies. An amateur astronomer’s organization independent from FIU, Southern Cross uses university classrooms for meetings.

dents to study about the universe, and its important for this university to help them do that,” Chirino said.

However, some complain that the university has not entirely helped that quest.

“It bugs me that there isn’t a better observatory we can use,” said Erdvig, a freshman and anthropology major.

Hearing of the complaints, Webb explained that the department once had an observatory, but it was closed because of fumes released by exhaust pipes from the chemistry labs.

Astronomy classes met for some time on the grass outside the CP building until Provost Mark Rosenberg ordered the Observation Pad built, fearing that passing students might trip on the star-gazing equipment.

“This place is great, but we still have to deal with [extra] problems, especially since we have the construction in front of us,” Webb said.

The School of Nursing has been erected next to the platform and the lights from the new Red Parking Garage are, according to Webb and his students, a major obstacle to viewing a clear, night sky.

“We’ve been trying to get a new observatory for seven years, but we’ll see what we can do for now. Any view of the sky we can get is still appreciated,” Webb said.

In hopes of addressing a major, current issue and to promote one of its latest programs, the Honors College will be hosting Dr. Paul Sanberg of the University of South Florida, one of the country’s leading stem cell researchers. He will present his discourse, “Stem Cells For Brain Repair,” as part of the Excellence Lecture Series.

The event, co-sponsored by the College of Arts and Science, will be held Nov. 3 at University Park, Room 140.

Sanberg will address the idea of using stem cells to repair brain and spinal cord injuries that result in paralysis.

Sanberg has studied at York University in Toronto, the University of British Columbia and the Australian National University where he received a doctorate in neurologcal science. He currently works at University of South Florida in the Center for Excellence for Aging and Brain Repair.

[The cells] form an amazing part of the body,” said event organizer Lesley Northup, associate dean of the Honors College and associate professor of Religious Studies. “However, there is the question of where to get the stem cells. That is an important ethical question for many people.”

Stem cells are normally found in all human beings. They are unique because in the embryonic stage, they can be turned into any of the 220 cells in the body, like heart cells and blood cells. Fertility clinics sometimes provide stem cells left over from in-vitro fertilization for research. The problem is that there is only a 10,000 or so nation-wide surplus of stem cells, and many believe this is not enough to continue advancing research.

“If some issues are resolved and they stop being politicized or turned into campaign issues, they will not advance as a research,” Northup said.

Sanberg’s lecture will promote FIU’s nascent medical school and the new premedical program held in cooperation with the University of South Florida and sponsored by the Honors College. It allows accepted premedical students to study at the USF School of Medicine in their senior year.

Yet, the Board of Governors is still considering the demand for a new South Florida medical school.

“At this point we’re still not sure,” said Barbara Rolla, advisor to premedical students. “However, if support is gained from the community, including local hospitals and doctors, as well as students willing to study in Miami, we will see.”

Nevertheless, donors have begun to aid the cause. This summer FIU Board of Trustees member Nathan Wertheim donated a $10 million dollars to the school.

But FIU is not alone in its endeavor to attain a medical program—University of Central Florida and Florida Atlantic University also want Medical Schools.

“We will have to do something to make us special if we wish to distinguish ourselves. The reasons are all there in terms of why Miami would be a good place to have [a medical school], but in the end, it is up to whether they decide we need one,” Rolla said.

JOURNALIST CRITICIZES ELECTIONS, MEDIA
By GRETIEL SARMIENTO Contributing Writer

Dressed in a crisp suit, hair combed back and neat, prestigious journalist Carl Bernstein began his lecture Oct. 27 by stating his pleasure at being invited to FIU.

The SGA Lectures Committee, who wanted to focus on this year’s presidential elections, invited Bernstein as part of the annual Heart Distinguished Lectures Series.

Carl Bernstein, a former rock and music critic for the Washington Post, covered the Watergate scandal in 1972 with fellow journalist Robert Woodward. Their investigation of the connection between the Nixon administration and the break-in at the Democratic headquarters led to the president’s eventual resignation.

Bernstein’s bestselling books, “The Final Days” and “All the President’s Men,” narrate the experiences of the investigative team during the incident. The journalist won the 1973 Pulitzer Prize in reporting.

The Wolfe University Center Ballroom at Biscayne Bay was filled to capacity so much so that extra chairs were brought in to accommodate those standing.

Bernstein explained that the main question or concern in people’s mind should not be if the next president is Republican or Democrat or Bush or Kerry, but if he has served the public.

He stated that the good of the public and overall truth during this presidency has to be a priority.

“I have never seen an administration like this one,” Bernstein said. He added that the current presidency has tried to fool the people by feeding them lies and hiding facts.

According to Bernstein, many people are rightly concerned about the integrity of the upcoming presidential election. He called Florida’s conduct during the last presidential election a national disgrace and said it is essential for our liberty that our election process be transparent.

Bernstein thinks the decline in political responsibility and the increasing abuses of the Constitution of the U.S. are parallel to the deterioration of goods reporting, which he defined as the best obtainable version of the truth.

“This is the worst political campaign I’ve ever seen in terms of coverage,” he said.

Focusing his attacks on television, Bernstein says the media has lost sight of the idea of truth, which he said has now become disfigured, unreal and contaminated by celebrities and gossip.

Bernstein also added that the media’s priority has become to entertain the public with opinions and judgments that have no basis and no context.

“We are going to our readers what we think they want, what we calculate would sell,” he said. “The media should present the truth—only then can there be judgments and different opinions.”

When an audience member asked about Michael Moore’s 2004 “Fahrenheit 9/11,” he described it as a piece of political advocacy and propaganda imbued with good reporting that began to expose facts, objective or not.

He urged the audience, as citizens of this nation, to demand “better and more,” because that is precisely what he believes the population is not receiving.

“This generation, which is so disconnected from the truth... is willing to promote the acceptance of untruth in an embrace of the idiot culture,” Bernstein said. He discusses this idea further in his article, “The Triumph of Idiot Culture.”

Quarter-life crisis leaves student wanting more from college, life

I’m majoring in biology, a subject that I’m not passionate about in order to get a job that I’ll probably hate. But, I want to make good money, and I don’t want to let down my family, my friends, and myself. It feels like I’m going through some sort of quarter-life crisis. I guess that’s something like a mid-life crisis, only earlier. It was never like this hidden inside of my physics textbook.

Slowly but surely, I became disillusioned. The classes started to seem trivial in the grand scheme of things. The lectures were boring and uninspiring. Like most of my classmates, I stopped attending my science classes and opted to study at home using my textbook and the course’s online webpage, following along with the instructor. I began to lose faith in academia.

My fire for learning that was once there has burnt out, and I feel like a miserable failure. At this point, I’m beginning to doubt myself. Maybe nothing will make me happy. If mind-numbing classes could kill my passion for science, surely they could do the same for any other major I pursue.

It’s a really tough decision that is going to cost me years of my life if I make the wrong choice. Most college students are at a crossroads in their lives, every one of them hesitant to step in any particular direction. It’s terrible to think that choosing the wrong major and making the wrong decision can potentially ruin the rest of your life. It cripples you. But, allowing yourself to be crippled by fear and self-doubt is probably the worst decision a person can make.

Sometimes you just need to say, “F it!” close your eyes, hold your breath and take the plunge. I’m going to change my major.

If in five years you find me behind the cash register of your local McDonalds, at least I won’t still be at FIU trying to make up my major.

With the Miami Book Fair approaching, South Floridians will get the chance to go out, relax, tap their feet and snap their fingers at The Spoken Word Café.

The Book Fair will be from Nov. 7-14. Beginning on Monday evening, The Spoken Word Café will be located in a tent in Wolfson Park on Miami Dade College’s Wolfson Campus. Each weekend, at 6:30 p.m. and all day Saturday and Sunday, listeners may hear authors read their work and listen to live music.

Lissette Mendez, program coordinator at the Florida Center for the Literary Arts, is coordinating the event. She has enlisted downtown’s Miami Transit Lounge to provide live music, which will follow the authors’ readings in constant rotation.

“This event will be a mummy competition. The goal is to wrap the other in toilet paper as quickly as possible before the music stops,” said Mendez.

There will be quite a few writers from Florida International University on hand on the fair. Denise Duhamel, assistant professor of poetry will read from her poetry collaboration, “Oyl,” about Popeye’s love interest, written with friend Maureen Seaton.

“My friend and collaborator, [Maureen], is a collector of all things Olive Oyl—she has book bags and combs and t-shirts, all with images of Olive Oyl,” Duhamel says.

She says it was because of Seaton that Duhamel became hooked on Olive Oyl and thus, they created their book.

“This event is free, and the Spoken Word Café should give you the chance to soak up great literature and music,” Mendez said.

Those who work at the Information Desk at the Biscayne Bay Campus’ Wolfe University Center held what they hope will become an annual costume contest.

The event, hosted by a French maid and a gangster straight out of Michael Jackson’s “Smooth Criminal” video, was sponsored by Bank of America.

The event kicked off with a mummy competition, in which teams of two had to wrap each other in toilet paper before the music stopped.

Winners received Blockbuster gift cards. FIU’s Golden Star Dancers followed, to the tune of Michael Jackson’s “Thriller.” The five dancers dressed as zombies and later entered the costume contest.

About 50 students watched the competition. Only seven students competed in the contest besides Golden Star Dancers. The other contestants included a knight and a Navy captain.

The captain said she was competing to honor all her friends fighting over seas.

“The turnout could have been better,” said Steven James, one of the contest’s hosts. “We needed people to come out.”

The contestants modeled onstage amid the leftover toilet paper. After the contest, there was a Halloween question and answer session.

Questions included: Where did Halloween originate? (Ireland) How many “witches” were killed in the Salem witch trials? (19) What is Wicca phobia? (Fear of witches)

The dancers won by audience applause. They shared a $50 gift certificate to the bookstore.
MTV encourages young people to vote

By CHRISTINE ADOLF

Campaign madness is everywhere. While most campaigning is for political parties, some campaigns, like MTV's "Choose or Lose," are urging people to simply exercise their right to vote.

A segment of "Choose or Lose" was filmed at FIU’s football field on Oct. 27. Producer Adam Hootnick explained that the purpose of the segments is to help people understand that every vote matters.

Last election, the difference between the candidates, Bush and Gore, was a mere 537 votes. This "Choose or Lose" followed a girl who did not vote in the last presidential election, but since then has joined another campaign called Rock the Vote which encourages young people to vote. "Choose or Lose" is one hell of a vampire slayer, it’s difficult to see her as a terrified social worker.

Supernatural thriller horrifies audiences

By HEATHER BRUMMER
Contributing Writer

"When someone dies in the grip of a powerful rage, a curse is left behind." At least that’s what Sarah Michelle Gellar’s character said in her latest film, “The Grudge.” The film is an eerie tale of a young social worker (Gellar) who visits Japan as an exchange student and gets more than she bargained for when she covers for a nurse who didn’t show up for work one day.

The supernatural thriller is set in a creepy house with only Gellar and a catatonic woman (Grace Zabriskie) and revolves around a curse that kills people in cycles while becoming increasingly powerful.

"The Grudge" follows a film trend – Japanese horror movie remakes. It began with, “The Ring” which was a successful adaptation of Japan’s “Ringu,” and it has continued to grow as audiences have embraced similar films.

Takashi Shimizu, writer and director of “The Grudge,” said that “Ringu” influenced him. He saw it as a film student and said it inspired him to make a horror movie completely different from anything he had seen before. He began with two short films that garnered him attention from people in high places. One of these was “Ju On,” which screenwriter Stephen Susco would later translate into “The Grudge.”

Translating foreign films has been relatively successful, but what about this movie? There seems to be no straight and narrow answer to this question. Are the characters poorly developed, is the plot predictable, and does it contain some genuinely frightening scenes? Catch the audience off guard at some points. Yet, it lacks the underlying terror we have come to expect in good horror movies.

The best way to describe "The Grudge" is to compare it to a book of scary stories – each scene frightens you (some more than others), but the outcome is mediocre at best. "The Grudge" does contain some genuinely scary parts. There are many scenes when you’ll jump because you’re not sure if something just passed by or if you imagined the whole thing.

After the movie, there are many things to be afraid of. Mirrors take on a new meaning. You’ll want to stay as far as possible away from the bathtub and the entire second story of the house is off-limits. You don’t have to see her face in order to flinch. And that head of hair shows up when you least expect it. The cinematographic effects are psychologically thrilling and work well.

Even after you discover the ending, something is missing. We understand what the curse is and how it happened, but still something is lacking. Furthermore, casting a film is an art and, although Buffy is one hell of a vampire slayer, it’s difficult to see her as a terrified social worker.

World Series Champions: “This is our year” to be reckoned with by sweeping the Anaheim Angels, the 2002 World Series Champions. They were ready for whatever came their way, especially the Yankees.

In the American League Championship, however, the Red Sox sputtered. Losing the first three games to the Yankees, Boston was on the brink of elimination. Things did not get any better as the team found its best pitcher, Curt Schilling, with a dislocated tendon in his ankle.

In game four, the Red Sox stood three outs away from being eliminated facing the best post-season closer in the history of baseball, Mariano Rivera. The team bounced back to tie the game sending it into extra innings.

Then, they put the game away with a walk-off homerun by David “Papi” Ortiz.

Red Sox had some dignity left. They weren’t going to be swept. Then in game five, the Red Sox had hope. After all, they had Pedro Martinez on the mound. They ended up in a similar situation as the game before, facing elimination with Rivera on the mound again. But lo and behold, the Red Sox prevailed again with an extra-inning base hit by, none other than, Papi himself.

The Red Sox became the first team in the history of baseball to be down 3-0 in a series and force a game six. They had the injured Curt Schilling on the mound. Before the game he had his ankle sutured up and pumped up with painkillers causing blood to seep through his sock, for everyone to see.

We all know what happened next. They took games six and seven in New York. They reached the World Series by beating the Yankees in the biggest choke in baseball history. New England would not have it any other way.

Boston reached the World Series and swept the St. Louis Cardinals, the team with the best record in baseball. The World Series was just an after-thought, though.

The real story was all the years of misery down the toilet. Babe, Buckner, Bucky and Boone will no longer be uttered in New England again.

Now, the Red Sox stand alone atop the baseball world as the 2004 World Series champions. Approximately five million people will attend their celebration parade and it couldn’t come at a better time for the tormented region of New England.

Sure their Patriots have won two out of the last three Super Bowls and are currently on a record 21-game winning streak, but the Red Sox exemplify heart and soul of this region.

How long have Sox fans been waiting for this? The last time they won the World Series women weren’t even allowed to vote. They’ve seen 16 presidents take office, the rise and fall of the Soviet Union, man land on the moon, the creation of the television, World War II, Vietnam and, most importantly, the Yankees win 26 World Series titles.

This victory was not only for the players but for the fans. Fans who were born Red Sox fans and died without seeing their team win.

These are true diehard fans that have the best attendance in the Majors, selling out every game for the past few years. You can tell New England that they don’t deserve it.

But, they’ll simply reply, “Why not us?” Because whether you like it or not, “This is our year.”
Men’s soccer to join Conference USA

By HARRY COLEMAN
Sports Editor

The men’s soccer team will have a new home in 2005—Conference USA.

The conferences’ Board of Directors voted unanimously to invite FIU to join the nine-member conference.

The soccer team currently plays in the Atlantic Soccer Conference. Conference USA will be the third league affiliation for FIU, which first started playing in the Trans America Athletic Conference.

All other FIU sports, including women’s soccer, play in the Sun Belt Conference, but that isn’t the case for the men, because the SBC doesn’t sponsor men’s soccer.

Moving into Conference USA will give Coach Karl Kremser’s team a more competitive schedule. They reached the NCAA tournament last season.

“We’re thrilled that Conference USA would deem us worthy to be invited in,” said Kremser.

“If you look at the programs in that conference and those that are being invited in, it’s a great honor and we’re looking forward to it.”

The men’s soccer team was almost eliminated two years ago due to budget cuts but the university managed to keep the team.

Athletic Director, Rick Mello, is excited to play in a bigger soccer conference.

“We’re very excited and pleased to be joining Conference USA in men’s soccer,” he said. “Conference USA is one of the most competitive men’s soccer conferences in the country and provides competition that is regional in nature with other public research universities.”

Conference USA will provide a hefty schedule for the team. Current members Memphis and University of Alabama at Birmingham are nationally ranked, and incoming member Southern Methodist University is currently third in the country.

“The intensity and caliber of our schedule is going to be greatly improved. It should be the top one or two conferences in the country. We are going to have to increase our intensity and our recruiting efforts,” Kremser said.

NEW HOME: The men’s soccer team will move to a more competitive conference next year—Conference USA. Above, Rick Mello presents Coach Karl Kremser with a plaque for winning his 300th game.
