Sometimes I wonder if people really understand what it feels like to live in a nation where democracy does not exist. From experience I can tell you that this is not easy. This is why I value my right to vote and so should every U.S. citizen. Our history is filled with displays of courage and heroism by men and women who gave their lives to assure that people in this nation could live free of fear, oppression, persecution, and in today’s world: terrorism.

The presidential election of 2004 will be one of the most important elections in the new world of technology and international terror. Issues like homeland security and the draft will play a major role in the votes of many. For students, I think that this election may be the most crucial as they are the foundation for many things to come.

Homeland security is important, because, without it, people will revert to living in a state of disbelief and constant fear. As we have learned, we have reached a sense of security by engaging the enemy head-on where they live and train. This is not a popular policy as we are sending our military overseas to fight an enemy that is willing to hurt us all without remorse or hesitation. Our military and intelligence community is basically utilizing a combination of containment and deterrence to keep us safe.

They have managed to keep us terror-free within our borders since Sept. 11, 2001 and have managed to keep the terrorist running around in the other side of the world, creating a shield for us to enjoy.

Please remember to vote and to encourage your friends and family to do so. We live in a great nation of dreams and realities. It is a dream to think that we can fight terrorism within our borders.

The reality is that we are better protected by fighting terror where terrorists live. With that said, please exercise your option to research the issues and the candidates. Remember that the choices you make on November 2 will affect us all. Vote smart. Vote for President Bush.

– Juan F. D’Arce, Jr.
FIU College Republicans President

Tomorrow is the day that will change all of our lives, Election Day 2004. It’s been a fun and rewarding experience for the College Democrats and me to promote John Kerry and educate the FIU community as to why he is the best candidate for president of the United States. As college students, we have more riding on the line than any group of voters.

In the past four years, only 3 out of every 10 graduates have found work upon graduation. This is unacceptable and John Kerry has a better plan for us. He will eliminate tax credits for companies that ship jobs overseas and will provide a tax incentive for those that create good paying jobs here in America. He will also eliminate tax cuts for those earning over $200,000 and keep tax cuts in place for the middle class.

Kerry’s plans to repeal the tax cut and restructure government spending, will insure health coverage for 100 percent of children and 95 percent of adults. That is why he gives everyone the option of having the same health care that our elected officials get.

John Kerry will fight a smarter, more effective war on terror. He will not take his eye off those who attacked us on 9/11. Coming from a man who voluntarily served his country in Vietnam when many ran from the call to fight, he has the bravery and experience to follow through with what he says. Kerry will work to repair relationships with our allies so that the war on terror can be properly fought on a global scale.

If you haven’t already, take the time to vote for Senator Kerry. Within hours we will have a new president/veteran that will offer a change in direction for America to make us a much more prosperous, safer country.

– James Valle,
FIU College Democrats President

As for higher education, Kerry has a plan that gives all students the opportunity to get a college education. The Kerry administration will provide a fully refundable tax credit on $4000 of college tuition for anyone who dedicates two years of service to America, and it does not have to be military service.

John Kerry will fight a smarter, more effective war on terror. He will not take his eye off those who attacked us on 9/11. Coming from a man who voluntarily served his country in Vietnam when many ran from the call to fight, he has the bravery and experience to follow through with what he says. Amendment 1

Section 22. Parental notice of termination of a minor's pregnancy. The legislature shall not limit or deny the privacy guaranteed to a minor under the United States Constitution as interpreted by the United States Supreme Court. Notwithstanding a minor's right of privacy provided in Section 23 of Article I, the Legislature is authorized to require by general law for notification to a parent or guardian of a minor before the termination of the minor's pregnancy. The Legislature shall provide exceptions to such requirement for notification and shall create a process for judicial waiver of the notification.

Amendment 2

Constitutional Amendments Proposed By Initiative. Proposing amendments to the State Constitution to require the sponsor of a constitutional amendment proposed by citizen initiative to file the initiative petitions with the Secretary of State by February 1 of the year of a general election in order to have the measure submitted to the electors for approval or rejection at the following November's general election, and to require the Florida Supreme Court to render an advisory opinion addressing the validity of an initiative petition by April 1 of the year in which the amendment is to be submitted to the electors.

Amendment 3

The Medical Liability Claimant's Compensation Amendment. Propose to amend the State Constitution to provide that an injured claimant who enters into a contingency fee agreement with an attorney in a claim for medical liability is entitled to no less than 70% of the first $250,000.00 in all damages received by the claimant, and 90% of damages in excess of $250,000.00, exclusive of reasonable and customary costs and regardless of the number of defendants. This amendment is intended to be self-executing.

Amendment 4

Authorizes Miami-Dade and Broward County Voters to Approve Slot Machines in Parimutuel Facilities. Authorizes Miami-Dade and Broward Counties to hold referenda on whether to authorize slot machines in existing, licensed parimutuel facilities (thoroughbred and harness racing, greyhound racing, and jai alai) that have conducted live racing or games in that county during each of the last two calendar years before effective date of this amendment. The Legislature may tax slot machine revenues, and any such taxes must supplement public education funding statewide. Requires implementing legislation. This amendment alone has no fiscal impact on government. If slot machines are authorized in Miami-Dade or Broward counties, governmental costs associated with additional gambling will increase by an unknown amount and local sales tax-related revenues will be reduced by $5 million to $8 million annually. If the Legislature also chooses to tax slot machine revenues, state tax revenues from Miami-Dade and Broward counties combined would range from $200 million to $500 million annually.

Amendment 5

Florida Minimum Wage Amendment. This amendment creates a Florida minimum wage covering all employees in the state covered by the federal minimum wage. The state minimum wage will start at $6.15 per hour six months after enactment, and thereafter be indexed to inflation each year. It provides for enforcement, including double damages for unpaid wages, attorney’s fees, and fines by the state. It forbids retaliation against employees for exercising this right. The impact of this amendment on costs and revenues of state and local governments is expected to be minimal.

Amendment 6

Repeal of High Speed Rail Amendment. This amendment repeals an amendment in the Florida Constitution that requires that Legislature, the Cabinet and the Governor to proceed with the development and operation of a high speed ground transportation system by the state and/or by a private entity. The probable financial impact of passage of this amendment is a state cost savings ranging from $20 billion to $25 billion over the next 30 years. This estimate assumes the repeal of associated laws, the use of state bonds to finance construction, and could be reduced by federal or private sector funding.

Amendment 7

Patient's Right to Know About Adverse Medical Incidents. Current Florida law restricts information available to patients related to investigations of adverse medical incidents, such as medical malpractice. This amendment would give patients the right to review, upon request, records of health care facilities or providers’ adverse medical incidents, including those which could cause injury or death. Provides that patients’ identities should not be disclosed. The direct financial impact this amendment will have on state and local government revenues and expenditures cannot be determined, but is expected to be minimal. State agencies will incur some additional costs to comply with public records requirements of the amendment, but these costs will be generally offset by fees charged to the persons requesting the information.

Amendment 8

Public Protection from Repeated Medical Malpractice. Current law allows medical doctors who have committed repeated malpractice to be licensed to practice medicine in Florida. This amendment prohibits medical doctors who have been found to have committed three or more incidents of medical malpractice from being licensed to practice medicine in Florida. The direct financial impact on state and local governments resulting from the proposed initiative would be minimal. There will likely be additional costs to state of less than $1 million per year, but these costs will be offset by licensure fees.

Who will rise victorious?

THE CONTENDERs: On November 2, the country will cast their votes and the future of our nation will be decided. With polls closer than ever, it appears as though this will be an extremely close election, much like the one in 2000. For many students at FIU, this will be the first voting for president. It’s as much an exciting time as it is a crucial time. No matter what age group, it is crucial that all U.S. citizens fulfill their obligatory duty to this country and vote.

In hopes of addressing a major, current issue and to promote one of its latest programs, the Honors College will be hosting Dr. Paul Sanberg of the University of South Florida, Florida Atlantic University and Miami University of Ohio, as part of the Excellence for Aging and Brain Repair.

Dr. Paul Sanberg (left), a pioneer in stem cell research, will address the idea that many students get to watch this special natural phenomenon through telescopes provided by the FIU Society of Physics Students. He will present his research, “A research university like our university has not entirely helped fund the research.”

Starry, Starry Night: Astronomy graduate student Humberto Velasquez peers through a telescope to observe the Oct. 27 lunar eclipse. "At this point we’re still not sure,” said Barbara Roller, advisor to premedical students. "However, if support is gained from the community, including local hospitals and doctors, as well as students willing to study in Miami, we will see.”

Nevertheless, donors have begun to aid the cause. This summer FIU Board of Trustees member Nathan Wertheim donated a $10 million dollars to the school.

But FIU is not alone in its endeavor to attain a medical program—University of Central Florida and Florida Atlantic University also want Medical Schools.

“We will have to do something to make us special if we wish to distinguish ourselves. The reasons are all there in terms of why Miami would be a good place to have [a medical school]”, but in the end, it is up to whether they decide we need one,” Roller said.

Honors lecture to discuss stem cell controversy
Journalist criticizes elections, media

By GRETIEL SARMIENTO
Contributing Writer

Dressed in a crisp suit, hair combed back and neat, prestigious journalist Carl Bernstein began his lecture Oct. 27 by stating his pleasure at being invited to FIU.

The SGA Lectures Committee, who wanted to focus on this year’s presidential elections, invited Bernstein as part of the annual Hearst Distinguished Lectures Series.

Carl Bernstein, a former rock and music critic for the Washington Post, covered the Watergate scandal in 1972 with fellow journalist Robert Woodward. Their investigation of the connection between Nixon’s administration and the break-in at the Democratic headquarters led to the president’s eventual resignation.

Bernstein’s bestselling books, “The Final Days” and “All the President’s Men,” narrate the experiences of the investigative team during the incident. The journalist won the 1973 Pulitzer Prize in Reporting.

The Wolfe University Center Ballroom at Biscayne Bay was filled to capacity so much so that extra chairs were brought in to accommodate those standing.

Bernstein explained that the main question or concern in people’s mind should not be if the next president is Republican or Democrat or Bush or Kerry, but if he has served the public.

He stated that the good of the public and overall truth during this presidency has to be a priority.

“I have never seen an administration like this one,” Bernstein said. He added that the current presidency has tried to fool the people by feeding them lies and hiding facts.

According to Bernstein, many people are rightly concerned about the integrity of the upcoming presidential election. He called Florida’s conduct during the last presidential election a national disgrace and said it is essential for our liberty that our election process be fair.

Bernstein thinks the decline in political responsibility and the increasing abuses of the Constitution of the U.S. are parallel to the deterioration of good reporting, which he defined as the best obtainable version of the truth.

“This is the worst political campaign I’ve ever seen in terms of coverage,” he said.

Focusing his attacks on television, Bernstein says the media has lost sight of the idea of truth, which he said has now become disfigured, unreal and contaminated by celebrities and gossip.

Bernstein also added that the media’s priority has become to entertain the public with opinions and judgments that have no basis and no context.

“We are giving our readers what we think they want, what we calculate would sell,” he said. “The media should present the truth first—only then can there be judgments and different opinions.”

When an audience member asked about Michael Moore’s 2004 “Fahrenheit 9/11,” he described it as a piece of political advocacy and propaganda imbued with good reporting that began to expose facts, objective or not.

He urged the audience, as citizens of this nation, to demand “better and more,” because that is precisely what he believes the population is not receiving.

“Some generation, which is so disconnected from the truth is willing to promote the acceptance of untruth in an embrace of the idiot culture,” Bernstein said. He discusses this idea further in his article, “The Triumph of Idiot Culture.”

A student reported that he was walking through the parking lot at the University Park Apartments when he saw a person by his vehicle. When the student approached his car, the two suspects drove off in a green Chevy Suburban. The rear passenger window of the student’s car was shattered but no property was taken.

Police searched the area but found nothing.

The Visa Card Company notified a University Park housing student around 8:30 a.m. that his credit card had been used in numerous transactions across Miami-Dade County. When the student looked for his wallet, he was unable to find it. He stated that he had his wallet when he drove into the residence hall around midnight but must have lost it walking through the parking lot. All of the unauthorized transactions occurred between midnight and 8 a.m.

Quarter-life crisis leaves student wanting more from college, life

By LUIS NIN
Copy Editor

This year, classes seem more difficult than ever before. Every week, I find myself either staying up late or waking up early to study. I’m burned out of my eyes in assignments, papers and exams. Behind every note I write and every fact I learn, there is this terrible feeling of emptiness. I keep wondering if the path I’m choosing to follow will ever make me happy. I’m going through something most college students experience; I’m considering changing my major. The classes I’m taking aren’t fulfilling or enlightening. I never leave a class feeling like I accomplished something. They feel like the academic equivalent of jumping through hoops and over hurdles, just a bunch of pointless exercises in tediumness.

When I began college, I felt passionate about science; I’m considering changing my major. I’m majoring in biology, a subject that I’m not passionate about in order to get a job that I’ll probably hate. But, I want to make good money, and I don’t want to let down my family, my friends, and myself. It feels like I’m going through some sort of quarter-life crisis. I guess that’s something like a mid-life crisis, only earlier. It was never like this hidden inside of my physics textbook.

Slowly but surely, I became disillusioned. The classes started to seem trivial in the grand scheme of things. The lectures were boring and uninspiring. Like most of my classmates, I stopped attending my science classes and opted to study at home using my textbook and the course’s online webpage, following along with the instructor. I began to lose faith in academia.

My fire for learning that was once there has burnt out, and I feel like a miserable failure. At this point, I’m beginning to doubt myself. Maybe nothing will make me happy. If mind numbing classes could kill my passion for science, surely they could do the same for any other major I pursue.

It’s a really tough decision that is going to cost me years of my life if I make the wrong choice. Most college students are at a crossroads in their lives, every one of them hesitant to step in any particular direction. It’s terrible to think that choosing the wrong major and making the wrong decision can potentially ruin the rest of your life. It cripples you. But, allowing yourself to be crippled by fear and self-doubt is probably the worst decision a person can make.

Allowing yourself to be crippled by fear and self-doubt is probably the worst decision a person can make.

Sometimes you just need to say, “I’m it!”, close your eyes, hold your breath and take the plunge. I’m going to change my major. If in five years you find me behind the cash register of your local McDonalds, at least I won’t still be at FIU trying to make up my mind. And hell, I’ll super-size your value meal for free.

With the Miami Book Fair approaching, South Floridians will get the chance to go out, relax, tap their feet and snap their fingers at The Spoken Word Café.

The Book Fair will be from Nov. 7-14. Beginning on Monday evening, The Spoken Word Café will be located in a tent in Wolfson Park on Miami Dade College’s Wolfson Campus. Each weekend at 6:30 p.m. and all day Saturday and Sunday beginning at 10:30 a.m., listeners may hear authors read their work and listen to live music.

Lissette Mendez, program coordinator at the Florida Center for the Literary Arts, is coordinating the event. She has enlisted downtown’s Miami Transit Lounge to provide live music, which will follow the authors’ readings in constant rotation.

“I want listeners to come away from the Spoken Word Café with a bigger idea of story than when they came in. They will be inspired by the mix of work and the liveliness of writers at all stages of their careers, mixing it up, sharing the stage,” Mendez said.

There will be quite a few writers from Florida International University on hand at the fair. Denise Duhamel, assistant professor of poetry will read from his poetry collaboration, “Oyl,” about Popeye’s love interest, written with friend Maureen Seaton.

“My friend and collaborator, [Maureen], is a collector of all things Olive Oyl—she has book bags and combs and t-shirts, all with images of Olive Oyl,” Duhamel says.

It was because of Seaton that Duhamel became hooked on Olive Oyl and thus, they created their book.

The event is free, and the Spoken Word Café should give you the chance to soak up great literature and music.
Supernatural thriller horrifies audiences

By HEATHER BRUMMER
Contributing Writer

"When someone dies in the grip of a powerful rage, a curse is left behind." At least that’s what Sarah Michelle Gellar’s character said in her latest film, “The Grudge.” The film is an eerie tale of a young social worker (Gellar) who visits Japan as an exchange student and gets more than she bargained for when she covers for a nurse who didn’t show up for work one day.

The supernatural thriller is set in a creepy house with only Gellar and a catatonic woman (Grace Zabriskie) and revolves around a curse that kills people in cycles while becoming increasingly powerful.

“The Grudge” follows a film trend — Japanese horror movie remakes. It began with, "The Ring," a successful adaptation of Japan’s "Ringu," and it has continued to grow as audiences have embraced similar films.

Takashi Shimizu, writer and director of "The Grudge," said that "Ringu" influenced him. He saw it as a film student and said it inspired him to make a horror movie completely different from anything he had seen before.

He began with two short films that garnered him attention from people in high places. One of these was "Ju On," which screenwriter Stephen Susco would later translate into "The Grudge."

Translating foreign films has been relatively successful, but what about this movie? There seems to be no straight and narrow path to success, as each scene frightens viewers differently. The film is composed of frightening scenes that catch the audience off guard at some points. Yet, it lacks the underlying terror we have come to expect in good horror movies.

The best way to describe "The Grudge" is to compare it to a book of scary stories — each scene frightens you (some more than others), but the outcome is mediocre at best.

"The Grudge" does contain some genuinely scary parts. There are many scenes when you’ll jump because you’re not sure if something just passed by or if you imagined the whole thing.

After the movie, there are many things to be afraid of: Mirrors take on a new meaning. You’ll want to stay as far as possible away from the bathtub and the entire second story of the house is off-limits.

The long, dark hair of one of the ghosts seems to take on a life of its own. You don’t have to see her face in order to flinch. And that head of hair shows up when you least expect it. The cinematographic effects are psychologically thrilling and work well.

Even after you discover the ending, something is missing. We understand what the curse is and how it happened, but still something is lacking. Furthermore, casting a film is an art and, although Bufty is one hell of a vampire slayer, it’s difficult to see her as a terrifed social worker.

MTV encourages young people to vote

By CHRISTINE ADOLF

Campaign madness is everywhere. While most campaigning is for political parties, some campaigns, like MTV’s “Choose or Lose,” are urging people to simply exercise their right to vote.

A segment of “Choose or Lose” was filmed at FIU’s football field on Oct. 27. Producer Adam Hoorntick explained that the purpose of the segments is to help people understand that every vote matters.

Last election, the difference between the two candidates, Bush and Gore, was a mere 537 votes. This “Choose or Lose” followed a girl who did not vote in the last presidential election, but since then has joined another campaign called Rock the Vote which encourages young people to vote.

“Choose or Lose,” which travels from state to state, reaches millions of college students across the country. FIU students at the taping said that they support voting and, of course, want to be on television. The segment will air on MTV before the election, but since then has joined another campaign called Rock the Vote which encourages young people to vote.

to be reckoned with by sweeping the Anaheim Angels, the 2002 World Series Champions. They were ready for whatever came their way, especially the Yankees. In the American League Championship, however, the Red Sox sputtered. Losing the first three games to the Yankees, Boston was on the brink of elimination. Things did not get any better as the team found its best pitcher, Curt Schilling, with a dislocated tendon in his ankle.

In game four, the Red Sox stood three outs away from being eliminated facing the best post-season closer in the history of baseball, Mariano Rivera. The team bounced back to tie the game sending it into extra innings.

Then, they put the game away with a walk-off homerun by David “Papi” Ortiz. The Red Sox had some dignity left. They weren’t going to be swept.

Then in game five, the Red Sox had hope. After all, they had Pedro Martinez on the mound. They ended up in a similar situation as the game before, facing elimination with Rivera on the mound again. But lo and behold, the Red Sox prevailed again with an extra-inning base hit by, none other than, Papi himself.

The Red Sox became the first team in the history of baseball to be down 3-0 in a series and force a game six. They had the injured Curt Schilling on the mound. Before the game he had his ankle sutured up and pumped up with painkillers causing blood to seep through his sock, for everyone to see. We all know what happened next. They took games six and seven in New York.

They reached the World Series by beating the Yankees in the biggest choke in baseball history. New England would not have it any other way. Boston reached the World Series and swept the St. Louis Cardinals, the team with the best record in baseball. The World Series was just an after-thought, though.

The real story was all the years of misery down the toilet. Babe, Buckner, Bucky and Boone will no longer be uttered in New England again. Now, the Red Sox stand alone atop the baseball world as the 2004 World Series champions.

Approximately five million people will attend their celebration parade and it couldn’t come at a better time for the tormented region of New England. Sure their Patriots have won two out of the last three Super Bowls and are currently on a record 21-game winning streak, but the Red Sox exemplify heart and soul of this region.

How long have Sox fans been waiting for this? The last time they won the World Series women weren’t even allowed to vote. They’ve seen 16 presidents take office, the rise and fall of the Soviet Union, man land on the moon, the creation of the television, World War II, Vietnam and, most importantly, the Yankees win 26 World Series titles. This victory was not only for the players but for the fans. Fans who were born Red Sox fans and died without seeing their team win.

These are true diehard fans that have the best attendance in the Majors, selling out every game for the past few years. You can tell New England that they don’t deserve it. But, they’ll simply reply, “Why not us?” Because whether you like it or not, “This is our year.”
Men’s soccer to join Conference USA

By HARRY COLEMAN
Sports Editor

The men’s soccer team will have a new home in 2005—Conference USA.

The conferences’ Board of Directors voted unanimously to invite FIU into the nine-member conference.

The soccer team currently plays in the Atlantic Soccer Conference. Conference USA will be the third league affiliation for FIU, which first started playing in the Trans America Athletic Conference.

All other FIU sports, including women’s soccer, play in the Sun Belt Conference, but that’s not the case for the men, because the SBC doesn’t sponsor men’s soccer.

Moving into Conference USA will give Coach Karl Kremser’s team a more competitive schedule. They reached the NCAA tournament last season.

“We’re thrilled that Conference USA would deem us worthy to be invited in,” said Kremser.

“If you look at the programs in that conference and those that are being invited in, it’s a great honor and we’re looking forward to it.”

The men’s soccer team was almost eliminated two years ago due to budget cuts but the university managed to keep the team.

Athletic Director, Rick Mello, is excited to play in a bigger soccer conference.

“We’re very excited and pleased to be joining Conference USA in men’s soccer,” he said. “Conference USA is one of the most competitive men’s soccer conferences in the country and provides competition that is regional in nature with other public research universities.”

Conference USA will provide a hefty schedule for the team. Current members Memphis and University of Alabama at Birmingham are nationally ranked, and incoming member Southern Methodist University is currently third in the country.

“The intensity and caliber of our schedule is going to be greatly improved. It should be the top one or two conferences in the country. We are going to have to increase our intensity and our recruiting efforts,” Kremser said.

Red Sox kiss eighty-six year old curse goodbye

By XAVIER VILLAMARZO
Staff Writer

“This is our year.” That term has been made famous by Red Sox fans at the start of every spring for the past 86 years. Finally, after generations of heartache, it was their year. And it could not have come in a better way.

This Red Sox season began with the highest expectations ever. Attribute those expectations to last season’s American League Championship loss to the Yankees via an extra-inning homerun by Aaron Boone. Those expectations can also be attributed to the disaster off-season where the Red Sox whiffed on a deal for MVP Alex Rodriguez to have the Yankees pick him up.

The war with the Yankees was on. Boston picked up Yankee-killer Curt Schilling and proven closer Keith Foulke. The Red Sox felt they strengthened a team that almost beat the Yankees the previous season.

The season began with the Red Sox off to a hot start, bearing the Yankees in seven out of the first nine games they played. As the season continued, however, the front office realized that their defense was not strong enough to go all the way.

So the Red Sox did the unthinkable, they traded the most popular Red Sock since Ted Williams, Nomar Garciaparra. The Red Sox Nation criticized this move, but wunderkind 30-year-old General Manager Theo Epstein believed that their new additions would make the defense strong enough.

As the season went on, the Yankees eventually took the lead in the division, and Boston had to settle for the wild card spot to make the playoffs. In their first playoff series, the Red Sox showed they were a force to be reckoned with.

Dolphins snap men’s soccer three game win streak

By NIKOLAY OREKHOV

The Golden Panthers came to Jacksonville Oct. 26 riding on a three-game win-streak and looking for a fourth. Things did not go the team’s way, as it was shutout 2-0. FIU’s fifth leading scorer, sophomore Tommy Kranzovic found the back of the net from inside the box and recorded his 12th goal of the season, which is tops in the Atlantic Sun Conference. Kranzovic’s goal also proved to be his third game-winning score of the season. Jacksonville then added an insurance score during the 83rd minute on a loose ball that rolled away from FIU goalkeeper Shawn Crowe, which junior Brian Blackburn placed into the open net. Although, the Golden Panthers out shot the Dolphins 15-12 during the game, they recorded only three shots on goal. Lucas Scudder finished with one shot on goal and three shots total, FIU’s lone offensive highlight. Jacksonville goalkeeper Greg Williams sealed the match with one save and recorded his second shutout of the season, while Crowe finished with four saves in a losing effort.
Amendment 4 can’t help you graduate, but it can help you pay for college.

Amendment 4 could mean $500 million per year for Florida universities, which will save Bright Future Scholarships and hold down future tuition increases.

Amendment 4 states that slot machine tax revenue “must supplement public education funding statewide,” so the money cannot be diverted by politicians.

Amendment 4 means local control because it allows Miami-Dade and Broward County voters to decide for themselves what’s best for their communities.

On November 2nd, Vote yes on Amendment 4
