Students at the University Park campus met with some disturbing news on Nov. 9 after a 33-year-old graduate student was found in his bathroom with a knife wound to his chest. The event took place in Building 1 of the University Park Apartments.

According to Alberto Alfonso, the Public Safety investigator assigned to the case, the student's roommate made the discovery late that afternoon.

Although the roommate was in their room during the incident, Alfonso said that he had nothing to do with the unfortunate event.

The wound appeared to be self-inflicted, but because the victim was unable to talk due to sedatives administered at Jackson Memorial's Ryder Trauma Center, this could not be confirmed.

The knife, recovered at the scene, entered the student’s heart cavity but missed any vital organs. The student went into shock as a result of massive blood loss but was in stable condition at the time of The Beacon’s investigation.

Though the reasons behind the stabbing have yet to be determined, Alfonso said statements from the student’s friends pointed to possible reasons for his actions. These reasons include his grandmother’s death in September and a recent breakup with his long-term girlfriend.

As the appearance of ambulances fueled rumors around campus, students and administrators exhibited mixed reactions to the situation. “There weren’t people running around acting crazy or anything; we were all more surprised than shocked. But I don’t think it has sunk in to most of the residents that there was a stabbing here,” said Katherine Rahmes, a resident of the Apartments. “I thought the University did a good job in handling the situation so as

See STABBING, page 5

MOVIN’ ON UP: The expansion of the Health and Life Sciences building is an example of FIU’s readiness to open a medical school. John Lewis/The Beacon

By ERIC PENA
Staff Writer

The expansion of the Health and Life Sciences building is an example of FIU’s readiness to open a medical school.
Med school moves to next step

Medical, from page 1

making great progress as we go along.”

However, FIU is not the only school making such progress. UCF, which has also shown interest in developing a medical program of their own, will be meeting with the Board sometime in the coming weeks, although their own proposal has still not been made public. Still, the Orlando university’s Board of Trustees approved the foundation of a biomedical sciences college in July, a move which UCF states solidifies their intent to gain a medical school.

FIU has also set up program in anticipation of the initiative’s approval. The Honors College currently holds a transfer program with USF. Through this program, students from the Honors College are able to study pre-med at USF after their third year at FIU.

According to Breslin, the expansion of the Health and Life Sciences building can also be seen as a major boost for the proposal, show-casing the determina-nation and potential for growth FIU has.

FIU currently has $9.1 million reserved for the medical school and will ask for $11.3 million more next year. Eventually, administrators hope to gain $40 million to fund and construct the new college, which is expected to house research labs, a 400 seat auditorium, offices and centers for medical students to train while taking their residency.

Still, the growth of these programs does not necessarily herald the Board’s approval of the school.

“If the legislature says yes, it will take two years to officially open the school. Even then, there is a long training time for students seeking medical degrees. The longer we put this off, the longer we’ll be punished by the shortage of doctors,” Breslin said.

President Maidique’s presentation will take place at 12:30 p.m. in the Turlington Building, Tallahasse. Earlier in the day, administrators will pres-tent the case for implementing a Ph.D in Public Health at FIU, another way for the health sci-cences program to expand and pave the way for a medical school.
Theater’s lack of seats sparks complaints

By ELIZABETH PROCHET
Contributing Writer

Students and faculty scrambled to get tickets on Oct. 14 for the FIU theater debut of “Dracula,” the first play of the 2004 school year. However, some audience members in the crowded theater found that they had to walk across the stage to get to the first available fold-out chairs, which served as extra seating.

“If you’re selling tickets for an event, then there should be a seat for every ticket that’s sold. It’s not fair that paying customers have to stand and watch [the play],” said Yuraisy Velazcon, a freshman, who attended the Oct. 22 showings.

The box office and Theater Department may not be to blame, however, as the turn out for the shows completely amazed them.

“We released ‘Dracula’ because it was during the time of Halloween, and we thought people would go see it, because the story of the play is fitting for the holiday,” said Marilyn Skow, advisor and professor for the theater program. “It really came as a surprise to [the theater department]. We were not expecting such a huge turn out for this production.”

According to Skow, this might be the reason why there wasn’t enough room for the 95 people who purchased tickets for the October 14-24 showings. Another could be that “Dracula” was performed in the “Black Box,” a venue used only to entertain smaller audiences.

“If the ‘Black Box’ can hold up to 145 people but in order to accommodate the stage design the seating area had to be cut back,” Skow said.

But, according to the Theater Department, students shouldn’t expect all the FIU theatre productions to be as cramped as the first, their next play “Romeo and Juliet,” which runs Nov. 11 to 21, will be held in the second of the three rooms for on-stage productions, the Proscenium House. Although the Proscenium House’s restricted space limits technical stage designs, it holds about 235 people, significantly more than the “Black Box.”

“Because ‘Romeo and Juliet’ is more of a popular play, we anticipate a larger number of guests to come and see it,” Skow said.

There is also a third performance room, which doesn’t have a specific name but it located in DM 150. This room is mostly used by theater students to put on much smaller plays and rehearsals.

Enjoy a huge selection of our tasterageous menu with over 50 delicious combinations of hot and cold subs prepared fresh.

20% OFF
Maximum Value $5.00
EXPIRES 11/15/04

Coffee Talks provides an opportunity for prospective students to meet informally, enjoy a coffee break, and learn about degree programs in the Chapman Graduate School of Business. At Coffee Talks, you will receive important information about application and admissions procedures, curriculum content, course fees, and more.

RSVP: 305.348.3256 or http://cba.fiu.edu/web/graduate/infosessions.htm
POLICEBEAT

SATURDAY • NOVEMBER 6

The University Park Department of Public Safety issued a lookout bulletin at 6:30 p.m. for a male riding a motor scooter after a female housing resident submitted a stalking complaint. The woman reported that the man had been following her for the past two months. On this particular day, he struck her car with his motor scooter in an attempt to stop and speak with her. An officer soon spotted a person fitting the description around SW 16th St. and SW 107th Ave. The officer followed the person off campus and proceeded to stop him. He was identified as the man on the lookout bulletin. The suspect was arrested at the scene for stalking and trespassing after a warning.

MONDAY • NOVEMBER 8

The Construction Manager of the Recreation Center telephoned the Department of Public Safety, reporting that eight 27" television sets were stolen from a room in the Recreation Center between Nov. 4 and Nov. 6. The televisions were inside a locked chain-link fence. The Department reported that someone had tampered with the locking latch.

~ Compiled by Eric Pena
Students question university’s handling of stabbing incident they could’ve done a better job keeping the people out of the building who shouldn’t have been there. There were people everywhere," Rahmes said.

However, some of the residents did have reservations regarding the University officials’ handling of the incident.

"[The administration] refused to tell us any details about what was going on. We didn’t know if there was a killer on the loose or if it was self-inflicted or what," said Melanie Hesbacher, a resident of the Apartment’s J Building.

"All they told us was to not worry. They want to give an impression of ‘community’ here, but I felt like we weren’t being told the whole story; the students here want to be informed because we do care for one another. Also, I haven’t heard any updates, either, except for what was being shown on the news," she said.

The day after the incident, Dr. Rosa Jones, vice president for student affairs and human resources, released a memorandum to the housing community outlining the events.

It stated that: “The University Police Department is actively investigating the situation... and at this time [is] not pursuing a second person.”

It also told residents that they would receive more information as it was made available.

Members of the administration declined to comment, citing the open status of the case with the Department of Public Safety.

Psssst...what’s the buzz?

Know of any interesting events happening on campus? Have a good story to share?

Stop by GC 210 or WUC 124 to let us know!

STABBING, from page 1

It takes ingenuity, teamwork and a great deal of effort to pull off some of the high-profile engineering projects being done in the United States Air Force. Engineers who come aboard are immediately put on the fast track and have advancement opportunities typically not found in the private sector. From weapons systems and space station materials to the next generation of X-planes, whatever the project is, it’s always fresh, always important and always cutting edge. If this sounds like something you might be interested in, visit our Web site at AIRFORCE.COM or call us at 1-800-423-USAF to request more information.

©2004 Paid for by the U.S. Air Force. All rights reserved.
WINNER & LOSER

WINNER

Madonna: The pop-star turned children’s book author is celebrating her deal to make a fifth book, one that has a dog teach that money does not equal happiness. A book about a wealthy, hypocritical, self-important cat is still in the works.

LOSER

Cartwheeling kids: A California elementary school suspended a student for performing cartwheels during recess, because it is a dangerous safety concern. To follow suit, many schools will try sanding down all sharp edges found in nature.

QUOTEABLES

“It’s really fascinating if you’re like the biggest geek in the world.”
- Tom Hanks, actor, on the intense technology used in his latest film, The Polar Express, in an interview with David Letterman.

“It’s so long and boring and so difficult to get right.”
- Hugh Grant, actor, on the process of acting, specifically in his new film, Bridget Jones’s Diary: The Edge of Reason.

“All the people who went on it knew what they were up for. They had a personality that could cope, and they quite liked the fact that the rest of Britain would be watching.”
- Priscilla Presley, widow of Elvis Presley, during an acceptance speech for a British music award on behalf of her deceased husband.

SEND US YOUR LETTERS

Letters to the Editor must be dropped off in GC 210 at the University Park campus, WUC 124 at the Biscayne Bay Campus or sent to beacon@fiu.edu. Letters must include the writer’s full name, year in school, major/department and a valid phone number for verification purposes. If brought in to an office, a legitimate ID may be accepted instead of a phone number. The Beacon reserves the right to edit letters for clarity and/or spacing constraints. Letters must adhere to a maximum of 400 words.

By JOSE APARICIO

Staff Writer

We seem to have reached a half-way point, and after so many tests and papers, I just feel like sleeping in the fetal position in my bed all day. This extends to much more than just school though. I mean, I don’t feel like going to work. I’m in an existential dilemma where I’m wondering if any of this has any meaning at all, and I wonder why I should keep going.

But these are things we must do, things we are used to doing day in and day out, like lab rats, and a degree is our cheese. It’s never the big things that make us go crazy. It’s all the trivial little things that get us.

It’s stopping at the gas station for cigarettes and gas. The gas costs $2.20 a gallon and they don’t have the cigarettes I want. It’s driving around for 20 minutes to find a parking spot on the fifth floor, and then the garage elevator doesn’t work. It’s climbing down the five flights of stairs to realize that I forgot my lighter, which is on top of the book I need for class, which I placed in the seat next to me in the car so I wouldn’t forget it.

Now I’m running late for class and can’t get a cup of that nasty coffee they sell at school. Now because I was late, the girl from class with the pretty smile is talking to someone else. With no caffeine in my system, tired and annoyed, I lose a little more of my sanity.

But the day doesn’t stop there. There is traffic on the way home, and I can’t find the CD I want to hear. Once home, I find out that the financial aid check still hasn’t arrived.

I am hungry, and I grab a Coke from the kitchen. I put the Coke in a cup with lots of ice and head off to study. As I sit down the Coke spills all over me and onto the floor, leaving it feeling like a movie theater’s floor and leaving my crutch feeling like a wet crotch. Then I bend over to tie my shoe, and the shoelace breaks.

The hunger strikes harder now, but I only have $5 to last until Friday, and it’s only Tuesday. Now the question becomes do I want food, or do I want to buy cigarettes tomorrow? Opting for the cigarettes means it’s another night of Raman noodles. Heating them up I realize there is no clean silverware, so the noodles go cold as I find and wash a fork. Sitting down to eat cold food in sticky, cold pants, there is nothing to watch on TV.

Finally, it’s time to start studying. I slip out of my sticky pants and sit down at the desk to get some work done. Then I realize that I left my books in the car. After looking for my keys for an hour, I finally get my books out of the car and begin to study. As I begin to read and take notes, my pen runs out of ink.

So, remember this next time you sit down to write a paper or study. When you work on the computer constantly save your work.

Make sure your pen has plenty of ink, and don’t let the trivialities of life get to you. Remember to laugh; it’s better than crying when things go pear shape.

"It’s stopping at the gas station for cigarettes and gas..."
TRUE LOVE: In Phillip M. Church's modern rendition of Shakespeare's classic play, the famous star-crossed lovers are now faced with racial and religious discrimination.

TRUE LOVE:

In Phillip M. Church's modern rendition of Shakespeare's classic play, the famous star-crossed lovers are now faced with racial and religious discrimination.

Interacial couple struggles in modern American setting

By Betsy Martinez
Staff Writer

Professor Phillip M. Church sits on the edge of the stage dressed in black. When he gives stage directions, his hands twist in the air like dizzy ballerinas. Scene after scene, the silhouettes of the actors on stage reflect in his oval-shaped glasses. At the end of rehearsal, 30 pairs of ears listen to every word of his constructive criticism.

Church has remastered Shakespeare's most celebrated love story, "Romeo and Juliet," and it is the upcoming attraction at University Park's Wertheim Performing Arts Center.

The new unconventional production is set in a modern-day American city. Romeo (Jaren Rivas) is a young high school student and son to a wealthy American oil baron. He fights for the love of Juliet (Chrissie Fit), the teenage daughter of a prosperous Iranian art investor.

This story of love and hate, although slightly twisted, comes at a significant moment in our history.

"I think it's going to be a great play, because it focuses on the issues that are affecting America today. Our generation can definitely identify," said Damion Rochester, who plays Mercutio.

Church admits that his inspiration came from an article he recently read in the Miami Herald about a U.S. soldier who fell in love with an Iraqi woman. According to Church, their love for each other was so powerful that they fled the country and married in Germany.

"It's theater with a message. The audience will leave feeling like they gained something. It's exciting to present an old story in a new light," said Fit.

The newfound love between Romeo and Juliet deepens along with the between the two feuding families, the Montagues and the Capulets.

Hoping for a resolution, Doctor Lawrence (Kris Cardenas), and Juliet's Native American nurse (LaVonne Canfield), intervene with intellectual and spiritual powers to settle the catastrophe.

"This is a production that is trying to heal the space between East and West. If we could feel it, we could heal it. I truly feel that the Native American spirit could perform that healing," said Church.

Despite their passionate struggle, the destiny of these star-crossed lovers is ultimately sealed. They leave the audience with the striking reminder that hatred can lead to the tragic loss of innocence.

"There are many important issues being addressed in this production," said Abel Consejo, the production business manager.

Church's new version of the old love story offers a variety of newly tooled scenes.

They include a barbecue party scene for a soldier returning from the war in Iraq, an ancient Persian party scene, and a garden scene instead of the famous balcony scene.

"It is not about religion. It really is about the absence of respect and understanding toward a culture that is foreign and alien. It's a huge task, but we will be achieving it with honesty," said Church.

The performance will be running from Nov. 11 to 24. Show times are Thursday through Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. General admission is $10, and student admission is $8.

For more information call the box office at (305) 348-3789.
By LEIF ELLIOTT
Contributing Writer

“Brazilian culture, in general, loves dance,” said Augusto Soledade, dance professor and choreographer. Born in Bahia in northern Brazil, it is not surprising that he was drawn to a career in dance.

He always had an artistic inclination and dabbled in the visual arts—painting, drawing, and sculpting—before choosing dance.

Journalism was his first career choice, and he received his journalism degree from the Federal University of Bahia. Yet after initial on-the-job experience, life as a journalist did not hold the same appeal.

Therefore, he redirected his energy toward a dance career and returned to the same university for a dance degree.

Soledade cited Clyde Moen, American choreographer and dance professor as his main counselor, who helped him to pursue his dance career.

In 1995, he came to the U.S. and attended SUNY Brockport, where he received his M.F.A. in dance.

After completing his graduate studies, he undertook what he considers to be his greatest accomplishment—the formation of the Brazz Dance Theater.

It is a dance company comprised of his former students who travel throughout the country performing a fusion of Afro-Brazilian and contemporary dance.

Since receiving his M.F.A., he has taught and performed at several schools throughout the country, including Wells College, the University of Rochester and Smith College.

Soledade explained that he came to FIU because the position required someone who specialized in African Diasporic dance, his major research interest. He is committed to teaching and promoting African Diasporic dance, because he feels that the contributions of African cultures to dance have been severely minimized.

One of his classes this semester, African Diaspora III, focuses on Afro-Brazilian traditions. He is also teaching a modern dance course using Afro-fusion dance techniques and a performance studies course, which teaches students to understand performance.

When asked about his future goals, Soledade expressed his sincere hope that FIU students will show an interest in and an appreciation for the arts.

He will do his part to help promote the dance and theatre program as he and his students perform at the Faculty Concert, March 4-6 and 11-13. Several of Soledad’s Brazz Dance Theater members will visit this spring to perform throughout South Florida as he becomes more engaged in the community.
Remember, calories still count

By BARBARA QUINN
Knight Ridder

Some issues were not up for debate. Americans are too fat. We don’t eat enough fruits and vegetables. And we have no idea what a normal “portion” looks like. Other topics were the right news at the right time: We need to get off our duffs and exercise at least 30 minutes five to seven days a week. We could save this nation a heck of a lot of money and health woes if we would better integrate nutrition therapies into medical care.

Still, there was much to be debated at the recent Food and Nutrition Conference sponsored by the American Dietetic Association, the largest organization of nutrition professionals in the world.

This country is currently engaged in a low-carb craze. Based on what we know now, what would you say to Americans who struggle to lose weight?

Read my lips. “Calories still count.” Problem is, very few people in this great country seem to know what a calorie IS. For the record, calories are units of energy your body derives from food. Calories are found in protein, fat, carbohydrates and alcohol. If you put more calories into your body than it needs for energy, the excess will be converted to fat.

You make the point that calories count. Yet even experts agree that after three to six months on any type of diet, most people “plateau” and find it difficult to lose more weight. Is this a vast right-wing conspiracy?

Blame your body. After a certain period of weight loss, it tries to compensate by trying to hold on to whatever fat it has left. If you give up at this point, you’ll probably regain the weight you lost.

Stay on course with your diet and shake up your exercise routine a bit (like adding weight lifting) to convince your fat to surrender.

Researchers at the recent Food and Nutrition Conference told pregnant women to eat more fish to enhance the brain development of their offspring. However, women can safely eat up to 12 ounces of other fish each week.

Do you believe this country needs more nuts? If so, how many and what kind?

Research has found that a handful of nuts like almonds, Brazil nuts, cashews, hazelnuts, pecans, pistachios, walnuts and even peanuts a few times a week can help control blood pressure, lower cholesterol and may even help reduce the risk for some cancers. Walnuts are particularly high in linolenic acid, the healthful omega-3 fat found in fish.

A coalition of experts recommend we eat about one ounce of nuts four or five times a week for the health benefits. One ounce is about 23 almonds, 28 peanuts, or eight walnut halves. And don’t forget to count the calories!
WEEKLY FESTIVITIES: FIU kicked off the 2004 homecoming festivities at U.P. Campus on Nov. 5 with foul-mouthed comedian Carlos Mencia (top, center). On Nov. 10, students began voting for homecoming court candidates (left and right) and were treated to a free Barbecue in the GC fountain (bottom and center). ALL PHOTOS, JESSICA MARSHALL/THE BEACON (EXCEPT WHERE NOTED) and the winners are...

the beacon photography special. november 15, 2004

2004

SPIRIT PARADE: On Friday Nov. 12, hundreds of eager students waited near the 107th Ave. entrance to greet the parade entourage of decorated floats and the homecoming candidates who marched from Coral Park High School to FIU (bottom). On Nov. 13, the Golden Panthers’ John Haritan tackles a Georgia Southern Player (above). The Panthers lost, 53-32. Geoff Anderson/Special to the Beacon (top) Jessica Marshall/The Beacon (bottom)

Homecoming King & Queen
Raynard Morgan & Jessica Franchi-Alfaro

Homecoming Prince & Princess
Laz Diaz & Chaz-Lit Droguett

Lawn Decorations
Alpha Xi Delta & Sigma Alpha Mu

Banner
Tau Kappa Epsilon & Sigma Sigma Sigma

Parade
Pi Kapp Phi & Delta Phi Epsilon

Lip Sync
Delta Phi Epsilon & Pi Kappa Phi
Third straight conference title

By NIKOLAY OREKHOV
Staff Writer

Fans packed the stands of the FIU Soccer Stadium on Nov. 12 for the Golden Panthers home season finale.

In an attempt to reclaim the conference title for the third consecutive year, FIU had to defeat tough opponent No. 14 ranked Hartwick College.

The Golden Panthers came out ready to play and practically won the match in the first period when the team piled up three goals during an eight-minute stretch. FIU finished the game defeating Hartwick 3-1.

“We were all over the place in all facets of the game. Offensively we were creating things. Defensively, as a team we were giving them nothing,” said head coach Karl Kremser after the game.

With the win, the Golden Panthers won the conference title for the third consecutive season and improved to 11-5 and 5-0 in the ASC play; the Hawks dropped to (13-3-5) overall and (4-1-0) in the conference.

FIU jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the 19th minute of the match when Carron Williams received a great pass from Oscar Gil, dribbled past defenders and scored his first of two goals on the night.

Then, just over two minutes later, the same tandem found the net once more at the 20:41 mark. Williams took a pass inside the box and kicked it past the goalkeeper.

Williams gave him eight for the season to snap the Golden Panthers’ shutout streak, when he connected on a header that resulted from a free kick at the top of the box.

Golden Panther goalkeeper Shawn Crowe finished with three saves.

“I’m very pleased that we won, very pleased that we’re going into the tournament, but we need to work on finishing and playing a complete game, rather than just one half,” Kremser said.

The Hawks barely scored and were out of the game. Defensively we, as a team, were giving nothing,” said head coach Karl Kremser after the game.

The Golden Panthers home season of the FIU Soccer Stadium will return home and watch the NCAA soccer tournament selection show on ESPNEWS.

Between 4 and 5 p.m. on Nov. 15 at Gracie’s Grill, fans will be welcome to join the team to celebrate with player and coaches.

Third straight conference title
SIMMS, from page 15

Thanks to his playing skills in high school and growing stature, Simms started to be recruited by Rutgers, Niagara, Seton Hall, and FIU in tenth grade.

"[Former head coach Donnie Marshall] started recruiting me since my sophomore year," Simms said. "I liked the university and realized that none of those other schools were the proper fit for me."

After playing small and power forwards in high school, Simms must make a transition to center in college. Coming into the Fall semester out of shape, Simms hit the weight room and lost 20 pounds to prepare him for the physically daunting task of defending the paint in Division I basketball.

"I knew that around here, I couldn't get away with the little elbows and stuff I used to do. I had to be stronger," he said.

Someone who has helped Simms make the transition has is senior center Byron Burnett.

"[Byron Burnett] used to dominate me in practice, because I used to be too uptight when guarding him. He told me to get low when defending in the post, and now, I don't get pushed around," Simms said.

The team will base part of its strategy on the athletic ability of the big men due to the lack of size. On defense, they will trap the baseline and the paint to not allow anyone on one match ups. On offense, they will run a full court game that will consist of fast breaks and pushing the ball down the floor.

Simms will have a big impact on this type of offense. With the experience of playing the small and power forward, Simms is used to running down the floor and using his athleticism.

"I feel I have the quickest feet of all the big men, I know I can bring a lot of energy when I'm out there. My coaches told me to do whatever it takes to get the job done."

With new coach Sergio Rouco at the helm, the FIU players have a new focus. "There’s no more joking around. All the two and three year players are sick of losing. The atmosphere is very tense and no one is taking days off."

With tough opponents like UConn (University of Connecticut) and a new young core of players, the Golden Panthers will take the floor with a new plan and a new mind set.

Simms’s ability has convinced the squad, and they trust that he will serve as a crucial backup to Burnett. Since the beginning of training camp, Rouco has watched Simms’ development with interest and is pleased with the results.

"He’s our most improved player," Rouco said. "It’s tough for a freshman to come in a Division I program and pick up things right away, but he has. We expect a lot of him, and we are not treating him as a freshman."

OPEN HOUSES

The Florida International University College of Law invites you to attend any one of our 2004-2005 Recruitment Season Open House Events. At each of these events, you will have the opportunity to meet with members of our faculty and administrative team in a relaxed and informal setting.

Your questions concerning our admissions policies and procedures, financial aid, academic curriculum, student services and professional opportunities available to the FIU College of Law Student will be addressed.

To RSVP for any of these events please call 305-348-8006 or visit our web site at http://law.fiu.edu/admissions/recruiting.htm

BASKETBALL FANS...

Look for a full preview of the men’s and women’s basketball teams in Thursday’s edition of The Beacon.
Laura Vogel talks volleyball, Brad Pitt and Panthersoft

By XAVIER VILLAMARZO
Staff Writer

Junior Laura Vogel has been an emotional and statistical leader this season for the relatively young women’s volleyball team. She has shown prowess and versatility on the court, recording a total of 207 kills, 120 digs, 26 service aces and 76 total blocks.

On game night, she is always composed and intimidating, but after having a chat with her, you will see that she’s just a sweet Virginian who enjoys Brad Pitt, country music and peanut butter (probably all at the same time).

Q: Describe yourself in three words?
A: Compassionate, motivated, and sweet.

Q: What is the biggest difference between Miami and your hometown of Mechanicsville, Virginia?
A: Population and cultural diversity.

Q: Where are there better looking guys, Miami or Virginia?
A: In Miami, but they’re also much shorter.

Q: What is the corniest pick-up line you’ve ever had?
A: “Are you tired? Oh, because you’ve been running through my mind all day.”

Q: What CD currently spinning in your CD player?
A: Rascal Flatts [country music]

Q: What is the most embarrassing moment?
A: Whenever I trip and fall on the volleyball court, which happens a lot.

Q: List three things you like about FIU.
A: It’s in Florida. It has a beautiful campus, and it’s international.

Q: List three things you hate about FIU.
A: Panthersoft, 8:00 a.m. classes, and lack of student support for the athletes.

Q: What is your most beautiful campus?
A: Like I’m with my family.

Q: First words that come to your head when you hear the following names:
J: Cookie Stevens [Coach]
P: Power and intimidations.
R: Oksana Zabalueva [Outside hitter, second on team in total kills, roommate] Crazy Russian, quiet, amazing player, strong, hits the crap out of the ball.

Q: What is the corniest Phase?
A: “When I’m the on the court I feel …”

Q: Excited and ready to kick some [expletive].
A: Like I’m with my family.

Q: What has been your best individual moment of the season?
A: My performance in our win against Denver.

Q: What is the biggest difference between Miami and Virginia?
A: Population and cultural diversity.

Q: Describe this volleyball season in one word or phrase.

Q: What is your most guilty pleasure?
A: A Procrastination and eating crunchy peanut butter right out of the jar.

Q: List three things you like to do in your free time.
A: Watching T.V., going to the beach, and going to the movies.

Q: List three things you would do if you had a million dollars.
A: I’d be playing soccer.

Q: What is your best individual moment of the season?
A: I’d be playing soccer.

Q: What is your most embarrassing moment?
A: Whenever I trip and fall on the volleyball court, which happens a lot.

Q: Describe this volleyball season in one word or phrase.
A: A. Pictures, cell phone, not much, because I’m not materialistic.

Q: What has been your best individual moment of the season?
A: My performance in our win against Denver.

Q: What is the biggest difference between Miami and Virginia?
A: Population and cultural diversity.

Q: Describe this volleyball season in one word or phrase.

Q: What is the most embarrassing moment?
A: Whenever I trip and fall on the volleyball court, which happens a lot.

Q: List three words?
A: Like I’m with my family.

Q: What is the biggest difference between Miami and your hometown of Mechanicsville, Virginia?
A: Population and cultural diversity.

Q: Where are there better looking guys, Miami or Virginia?
A: In Miami, but they’re also much shorter.

Q: What is the corniest pick-up line you’ve ever had?
A: “Are you tired? Oh, because you’ve been running through my mind all day.”

Q: What CD currently spinning in your CD player?
A: Rascal Flatts [country music]

Q: What is the most embarrassing moment?
A: Whenever I trip and fall on the volleyball court, which happens a lot.

Q: List three things you like about FIU.
A: It’s in Florida. It has a beautiful campus, and it’s international.

Q: List three things you hate about FIU.
A: Panthersoft, 8:00 a.m. classes, and lack of student support for the athletes.

Q: What is your most beautiful campus?
A: Like I’m with my family.

Q: First words that come to your head when you hear the following names:
J: Cookie Stevens [Coach]
P: Power and intimidations.
R: Oksana Zabalueva [Outside hitter, second on team in total kills, roommate] Crazy Russian, quiet, amazing player, strong, hits the crap out of the ball.

Q: What is the corniest Phase?
A: “When I’m the on the court I feel …”

Q: Excited and ready to kick some [expletive].
A: Like I’m with my family.

Q: What has been your best individual moment of the season?
A: My performance in our win against Denver.

Q: What is the biggest difference between Miami and Virginia?
A: Population and cultural diversity.

Q: Describe this volleyball season in one word or phrase.

Q: What is the most embarrassing moment?
A: Whenever I trip and fall on the volleyball court, which happens a lot.

Q: List three things you like to do in your free time.
A: Watching T.V., going to the beach, and going to the movies.

Q: List three things you would do if you had a million dollars.
A: I’d be playing soccer.

Q: What is your best individual moment of the season?
A: I’d be playing soccer.

Q: What is your most embarrassing moment?
A: Whenever I trip and fall on the volleyball court, which happens a lot.

Q: Describe this volleyball season in one word or phrase.

Q: What is the biggest difference between Miami and Virginia?
A: Population and cultural diversity.

Q: Describe this volleyball season in one word or phrase.

Q: What is the most embarrassing moment?
A: Whenever I trip and fall on the volleyball court, which happens a lot.

Q: List three things you like to do in your free time.
A: Watching T.V., going to the beach, and going to the movies.

Q: List three things you would do if you had a million dollars.
A: I’d be playing soccer.

Q: What is your best individual moment of the season?
A: My performance in our win against Denver.
FIU loses fourth straight

By ANDRES CORDERO  Staff Writer

The triple-option attack of Georgia Southern exposed the FIU run defense, rushing 74 times for 440 yards en route to a 53-32 trouncing of the Golden Panthers in FIU Stadium.

The Eagles (9-2) spoiled FIU’s homecoming celebration, handing FIU a fourth consecutive loss as the home team drops to 2-5 on the year.

“It feels like we’ve been here before,” said head coach Don Strock after the game.

The Golden Panthers second-half woes continue to plague a team that’s averaging just over 28 points per game, while allowing opponents an average of nearly 36.

FIU gave up a half time lead for the third time in four games, this time spoiling a 25-17 advantage at the midpoint.

Led by quarterback Chaz Williams, Georgia Southern’s offense gained 535 total yards on 89 plays, totaling for five touchdowns on the ground and one on the air.

“That offense may be the toughest in America to defend,” said Strock. “I doubt we’ll see an offense like that again.”

Running the unorthodox triple-option, Williams managed to complete just 4 of 10 passes for 95 yards through the air but had a hand in four Georgia Southern touchdowns, running three in himself and throwing for a fourth.

The Eagles added a defensive score on a Josh Padrick interception taken back 70 yards by linebacker A. J. Bryant.

Georgia Southern’s 53 points is the second most allowed by FIU this season behind the 56 put forth by New Mexico State on October 30. That adds up to 109 points allowed in the last two games.

“We knew they were going to score points,” Strock said. “We knew we had to score points. Obviously, we came up short.”

Rashod Smith and Josh Padrick put up good numbers for the Golden Panthers. Smith gained 139 yards and scored two touchdowns on 20 carries for FIU.

Padrick threw for 281 yards and two touchdowns but blemished his performance with two interceptions.

“We have to come out and finish games and learn how to finish people,” Smith said in the post-game conference.

“It’s really disappointing,” added John Haritan, the team’s leading tackler. “They are a great program. We played well in the first half, but in the second [we] just let it slip away.”

The Golden Panthers hopes for a first winning season will have to wait until at least 2005. The loss clinches FIU’s third straight sub-.500 season since the program’s inception in 2001.

See SIMMS, page 13

Rouco to count on rookie Simms for big minutes

By ALDEN GONZALEZ  Staff Writer

During the wear and tear of four straight losing seasons, it has been tough for the FIU’s men’s basketball team to find a positive outlook.

But with the season kicking off this Friday, new coach Sergio Rouco along with his recruiting class, hope things can change.

One of those new hopes stands six and a half feet tall and carries a Colgate smile – Kenny Simms.

The New Jersey native comes to South Florida, offering a light at the end of the tunnel for the basketball program.

Despite being a freshman, great things are expected of Simms.

“We expect a little bit of everything from him,” said Rouco. “He’s done well in the exhibition games, and we expect him to play a lot of minutes.”

Along with new recruits forward Ismael N’Diaye (power forward) and guards Cesar Chavez, Carlos Taylor and Alan Guyton, the Golden Panthers hope to rebound from a disappointing 5-22 season where they went 1-13 against teams in the Sun Belt Conference.

Simms comes from Jackson Memorial High School, in New Jersey where he averaged 18 points, 12 rebounds, and four blocked shots as a senior.

Born in Queens, New York to Alfio and Doidro, Simms took on basketball at a very young age and gradually developed into a complete player.

With great support from his mother, he pursued his dream to play at the next level.

“My mom always told me to...”
IS THIS YOU?

IF YOU THINK YOU CAN GET AWAY WITH ILLEGALLY TRAFFICKING IN MOVIES, THINK AGAIN.

Pursuant to the Copyright Act (17 U.S.C. Section 504(c)), statutory damages can be as much as $30,000 per motion picture, and up to $150,000 per motion picture if the infringement is willful.

© 2004 Motion Picture Association of America, Inc.