History
Commercial development on streets carrying transit lines developed early on the perimeter of Sunset Drive (SW 72nd Street). Sunset Drive is the main road dividing the neighborhood, a declared historic road which was once a wagon trail and one of the first roads into Miami-Dade's interior (Dibble 1983). Officials in the Florida State Department's Bureau of Historic Preservation said Sunset's historic designation makes it the fifth such street in the state. Four of the other five in Miami-Dade County are Coral Way, Bird Road, Ingraham Highway and Old Cutler Road (Dibble 1983). In 1923, kids were playing on the porch of wood frame houses along Sunset Road saw few cars breaking the rural tranquility. Sixty years later, standing on the same porch, kids now watch cars travel up and down Sunset Drive in an unbroken stream (Dibble 1983). Metro-Dade planner John Lefley says the increased amount of traffic has indirectly affected the neighborhood and its surroundings. "It would make it much more difficult, if possible at all, to have intensive commercial development in the neighborhood if it wasn’t for the increase of traffic" he said.

One elementary school, two middle schools and two high schools are located within the Sunset neighborhood. A community college (Miami Dade Kendall Campus) is located just outside the neighborhood’s southern border. Three major hospitals are within a 3.5 mile radius of the city limits. The major airports, colleges, shopping and cultural centers, and beaches are all located within a short driving distance of Sunset. There are two neighborhood parks in the area where athletic activities are available for sports enthusiasts (Sanchez). From the time of its development the neighborhood of Sunset has been and continues to be a family-oriented community.

Sunset is in a unique position relative to attracting development (Sanchez). In addition to its physical characteristics, Sunset is a magnet for quality urban development. The relatively high living standards, with low densities per acre, are attracting high-density developments. Five Developments of Regional Impact (D.R.I.) surrounding the neighborhood (South Regional Planning Council) are planned for Sunset. Developments of Regional Impact (DRIs) are large-scale developments that are likely to have regional effects beyond the local government jurisdiction in which they are located.
