The Beacon, November 1, 2010

Florida International University

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.fiu.edu/student_newspaper

Recommended Citation
https://digitalcommons.fiu.edu/student_newspaper/699

This work is brought to you for free and open access by the Special Collections and University Archives at FIU Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Panther Press (formerly The Beacon) by an authorized administrator of FIU Digital Commons. For more information, please contact dcc@fiu.edu.
The Anti-Defamation League lists the Students for Justice in Palestine, including FIU’s chapter, as one of the largest anti-Israel organizations in America. SJP members are upset over the inclusion, and leaders of SJP across the nation are looking to raise awareness about their view on the Israeli government’s violation of human rights.

“We locate ourselves in a legacy of social justice movements working for a free and just world,” said Mnar Muhareb, president of SJP.

The organizations on ADL’s list are selected according to the popularity generated to each group, the optics in which they arrange events and the relationships developed with similar organizations.

Abraham H. Foxman, ADL’s national director, said that there are hundreds of groups that are involved and organize various anti-Israel activities.

“These groups are not promoting peace. They are spreading propaganda to assault Israel’s legitimacy,” said Foxman. “We want Americans to know whom these groups are and what it is they really stand for, which is to delegitimize the Jewish state.”

He went on to say that these groups use various campaigns to “denounce” Israel through the use of subjective messages that fail to take into account the intricacy between the Israeli-Palestinian conflicts.

A statement made by the ADL states that members of SJP routinely organize activities that present a biased view of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. On campuses all over the country, groups promoting Palestinian freedom have responded to these claims.

“We are united in our belief in justice, freedom and human rights for the Palestinian people,” said Muhareb. “We will continue to stand for the rights of the Palestinian people.”

The organizations encourage students to vote

In an effort to promote student participation in the midterm elections, politically driven organizations have hosted several events across the University aimed to inform voters on the candidates and issues on the ballot.

“It’s really important for young people to get out and to decide who’s going to run our country because it is our future,” said Students for Environmental Action President, Cara Cooper at the “March for Our Future” rally on Oct. 27.

Students and SJA members gathered on the Graham Center lawn to begin a University march to the West Dale Regional Library voting polls. The idea for the event, according to Cooper, came out of the voter registration and education campaign that SJA has been working on throughout the semester.

Cooper emphasized that the purpose of the march, although steered by environmental initiatives, was not to endorse green legislation.

“We thought it would be a great way to send a strong message that while we are a university organization that deals with the environment, this event is more about being young and having the power vote,” said Cooper.

The midterm elections, which involve several candidates on a state and local level, have propelled political organizations on campus to spread awareness to first-time voters.

“If I tell students to find an issue or two that they care strongly about and do research about which candidate or party’s policies are similar to yours,” said Michael Santana, president of college Democrats at FIU.

A three-way debate between College Democrats, Republicans, and Independents, on Nov. 1, in GC 140, is aiming to let people know where each party stands on issues, and encourage political attentiveness.

“While the student enthusiasm is significantly down from the last election cycle, a lot of people are aware of what’s going on with the economy and there’s some spotlight that people care,” said Vice President of College Republicans, Luis Valdez.

Student apathy towards midterm elections can be associated towards the lack of excitement they have in comparison to presidential elections or the belief that one vote does not make a difference.

“It may seem insignificant but if 100 other students feel that way, that is 100 votes, that may be the difference in a congressional race and in many local races. I believe that a North Miami Beach Commissioner won by just 5 votes,” said Santana.

Events like the debate and the march aimed to heighten issues on the ballot that could be important to students on campus.

Valdez hopes that students research the issues on the ballot, because they affect each person differently.

Sasha “Bleu” Waters, Student Government Association sustainability coordinator, was amongst the marchers who promoted energy efficiency. Waters took the event as an opportunity for all of the University’s environmental groups to stand as one unit, and “support youth — youth voting for our future.”

Events like the unified efforts of university organizations make a change at FIU. Waters believes that this could promote the same

Florida poverty rates highest since recession

Florida had the largest increase in poverty in the United States since the recession began almost three years ago, according to a report put out by the Research Institute on Social and Economic Policy.

The report showed that out of 2.7 million Floridians, approximately one in seven were living below poverty levels. People of working age between 18 and 64 had the largest rate of increase in poverty.

“This is a clear illustration of a link between poverty and jobs,” explained Emily Eisenhauer, co-author of the report and RISEP research associate. “That is, when people lose jobs, they fall into poverty, which makes any initiatives around job creation particularly important.”

According to Eisenhauer, the unemployment rate is fairly stabilized, but “the number of jobs that have been created over the last couple of months is really small in comparison to the problem of over a million people in this state [being] unemployed.”

In order to stimulate the economy and assist jobless citizens, Eisenhauer suggests that unemployment compensation should not be cut from people still struggling to find work.

“Unemployment compensation is one of the best stimulants, or stimulus, for the economy because with unemployment, you’re taking that money – you’re putting it directly into the pocket of somebody who’s immediately going to go out and spend it and buy something with it,” said Eisenhauer. “As opposed to something like tax cuts which, especially ones for the upper income, are not clear on how that trickles down into the economy.”

Some additional statistics from the report give details that one in five children under 18 years of age in Florida are living in poverty. Totaling 30.8 percent, this makes up the highest poverty rate of any age group in the state.

That is one of the worrisome problems, because children in poverty are obviously not going to have the same opportunities as other children,” said Eisenhauer.

Living in poverty decreases the chances that children have of getting an adequate education.

Of the 50 states, Florida had the largest increase in the percentage of people living in extreme poverty between 2007 and 2009. Extreme poverty is defined as a household with an annual income of $11,000 or less. There were 6.5 percent of Floridians living in extreme poverty compared to the national rate of 6.3 percent.

According to the report, more women than men living in poverty in Florida, with 16 percent of women compared to 13.8 percent of men, have had a higher unemployment rate during the recession.

African Americans have had the largest increase in poverty since 2007, followed by Hispanics. The proportion of impoverished African American children is more than double than the 10.5 percent of whites living in poverty.

The report outlined key statistics found by the American Community Survey and the Current Population Survey between 2007 and 2009. Both the American Community Survey and the Current Populat
Corrections

In the issue dated Oct. 25, 2010, the Verbatim section contained a quote incorrectly attributed to Governor McDonnell. It was former Chairman of the Virginia Beach Republican Party, David Bartholomew.

The Beacon will gladly change any errors. Call our UP office at 305-348-2709 or BBC at 305-919-4722.

Summit attendance creates conflict

SJP, page 1

to work for a just peace where Palestinians are free in their homeland and equals to Jewish Israelis.”

According to members of SJP, several Student Government leaders were sponsored by the American Israel Public Affairs Committee to attend a summit being held in South Florida on Oct. 24 and 25.

“We requested them not to go to the summit because Israel commits human rights violations against Palestinians every year. We seek justice, not revenge,” SJP said in a written statement to Student Media.

An official statement was also released by Student Governing Council at Modesto Madriague Campus
President Helena Ramirez, who said that they do not promote the views of AIPAC or any other organization unrelated to the activities of FIU.

According to SJP leaders, however, this was a false statement because AIPAC sponsored SGA’s trip, making it a clear conflict of interest as a polit-cal lobby was sponsoring students to conference as well as trips to Israel.

On that same statement released by SGC-MMC, Ramirez mentioned the request for the Facebook event page titled “FIU-SGA Say No to AIPAC” to be removed.

“We find it unfortunate that students and student organizations at the [MMC] have published statements in regards to our relationship with AIPAC without requesting formal consultation and discussion with their elected student leaders,” said Ramirez.

However, Maxine Hylton, director of the Graham Center said: “SJP members checked with me in regards to meeting a deadline for collection signatures for a cause, in which, in which the student group was granted a table inside GC to do so.”

SGP leaders stated that they received support from more than 200 students to hold a protest against AIPAC.

A press conference was held on Oct. 21 where SGC-MMC Vice President Nick Autiello and Chief of Staff Alina Gonzalez addressed concerns students had regarding their scheduled attendance at the AIPAC Summit.

“They assured students present that they would be attending the summit as individuals seeking information as opposed to student body,” said Dean
Williams, former SGC-MMC press secretary. “It was also clarified at the press conference on Oct. 21, as well as in the statement issued on Oct. 20, that student activity and service fees were not used to fund attendance at the summit.”

Eventually, four out of six members of SGA who had originally planned to attend the AIPAC summit decided not to.

Student Media reached out to Gonzalez and SGC-MMC Senate
Speaker Pro Tempore Hector Mejica, neither of whom attended the summit, however, they were unavailable for comments. Ramirez and Autiello still went on to attend.

According to the statement released by SGC-MMC, while student leaders represent the views of the student body, each student is entitled to freely associate as he or she wishes individually.

Guides can reduce ballot confusion

change in the government

“We need to make movements within our campus, before we can start breaking ground outside. If we can do it here, then we can do it anywhere,” said Waters.

According to Valdez, students who feel overwhelmed by the jargon of ballots can research Miami-Dade election guides that can make the trip to the booths much simpler.

“I don’t care who you vote for, just that you vote and that you are educating yourself and making sure that you’re voting for people who represent your values because we have to make sure that we are electing people who represent what we want,”
said Cooper.

Discover

King Abdullah University of Science and Technology

A research university unlike any other.

Discover bold, collaborative research initiatives in science, engineering and technology with state-of-the-art facilities, globally renowned faculty and students from over 60 countries. KAUST is a merit-based university dedicated to significificant high-impact research. Embark on a new era of scientific achievement for Saudi Arabia, the region, and the world.

Scholarships for Science and Engineering students

Complete a Master’s or Ph.D. program with full tuition support, free housing, living stipend, medical insurance and relocation support.

Applied Mathematics and Computational Sciences, Bioscience, Chemical Sciences, Chemical and Biological Engineering, Computer Science, Earth Science and Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Environmental Science and Engineering, Marine Science, Material Science and Engineering, Mechanical Engineering.

Visit the KAUST website for information on Program Specializations www.kaust.edu.sa

For more information about applying to KAUST please visit our web site at www.kaust.edu.sa

About KAUST

KAUST is a new university located on the shores of the Red Sea in Saudi Arabia.

The University research facilities include nanofabrication, imaging and characterization, and a fully-equipped class 100 clean room, and science-focused research centers.

The community has many things to offer including: housing, healthcare, shopping, dining,
workshops and sport facilities including golf course, sailing facilities, gyms with swimming pools, running tracks, etc.
FIU win streak snapped by struggling Florida Atlantic

IGOR MELLO
Staff Writer

The Shula Bowl IX trophy will stay in Boca Raton for yet another year. For the fifth consecutive year, FIU (2-5, 2-1 Sun Belt) fell short to Florida Atlantic University (2-5, 1-3 Sun Belt) 21-9.

For the seniors, it was their last opportunity to overcome their cross-town rivals. One of the team captains, linebacker Toronto Smith, can speak on the behalf of the senior class.

“This sucks. Really bad,” Smith said after finishing the game with eight tackles.

The defense allowed 187 yards rushing and two touchdowns on the ground, one from Alfred Morris and another from Willie Floyd, to put the game out of reach. Morris led the Owls, rushing for 108 yards while his back, Floyd gained 93 yards on the ground.

“The defense started to get their eyes off of their keys. They started to get misaligned,” said Smith. “It’s definitely a learning experience for us. We got to learn that we have to finish.”

A crucial moment of the game came early in the fourth quarter where quarterback Wesley Carroll orchestrated a 14-play, 94-yard drive across the field that would have given the Golden Panthers the lead had they scored a touchdown.

Instead the Golden Panthers were stuffed on four goal-line attempts at the two-yard line. “It’s almost a walk-in if it’s executed the right way,” said head coach Mario Cristobal about his play calling on third and fourth down.

On third and fourth down, Cristobal opted to take out Carroll from under center and use his wildcat formation. Although the wildcat formation has been normally used with wide receiver T.Y. Hilton as the quarterback throughout the season, the Golden Panthers used Wayne Times to take the snap.

On third down, Times kept the ball and was stopped for no gain. Without hesitation, the offense went for it on fourth and goal as Times elected to pass the ball from the wildcat formation to his tight end Jonathan Faucher.

“We felt good about it, it’s been real good for us in practice, it’s been good in games. It’s a good play. We need to score,” Cristobal said.

Despite not being able to execute that play in the goal line, Cristobal has no regrets with his play calling.

“I’d run the same play. There’s no second-guessing. It’s football,” Cristobal said.

The wildcat formation went for 17 yards on six plays. Times scrambled three times for eleven yards, he handed it off to T.Y. Hilton on a sweep for another from Willie Floyd.

The defense allowed Florida Atlantic to move the ball down the field in the second quarter. They scored a touchdown. The Shula Bowl was celebrated on that touchdown.

Watching the Florida Atlantic Owls celebrating a Shula Bowl victory appears to be how things should be.

It seems like watching Howard Schnellenberger smiling and waving as he carries the trophy with his team surrounding him is simply how the football gods want it to be.

Maybe it’s fate. Maybe it’s destiny.

But whatever it is, it happened yet again as the Golden Panthers once again make a trek down the Turnpike both defeated and wondering what it is exactly to break out of this curse. The never-ending, reoccurring nightmare continues.

Just when it looked like the Golden Panthers put their late-game collapses behind them and were poised to take the necessary steps to finally earn a victory against their South Florida nemesis, they somehow find themselves outside of the win column against the one team that knows how to defeat them over and over again.

It didn’t matter that the Golden Panthers were facing a deflated and aimless Florida Atlantic team that was on life support heading into this annual rivalry showdown after dropping five straight matches.

It didn’t matter that this was a Golden Panthers team with bowl game aspirations, the momentum of a two-game winning streak in conference play and a chance to make its case as a Sun Belt Conference contender.

The team simply came undone in the final quarter of play, allowing the Owls to run away with the game and keep the Shula Bowl Trophy in Boca Raton for yet another pain-staking year.

ANOTHER MELTDOWN

Three interceptions chucked by Wesley Carroll in the fourth quarter, questionable decisions with points on the line, fourth-down shortcomings and a failure to prevent the big play alongside a failure to create one sent the Golden Panthers to their doom.

Another so close, yet so far performance. Another disappointing drive down the Turnpike.

Allowing the Owls to deliver the fatal dagger time and time again appears to be turning into a self-filling prophecy.

The Golden Panthers were able to move the ball down the field but failed to reach the Promised Land on several occasions, the final straw coming at the beginning of the fourth quarter when the offense drove down inside the five-yard line but failed to convert.

Then the floodgates broke wide open as the game unraveled and unleashed a chain of events.
Carroll struggles in loss; Hilton given Shula Bowl MVP six yards and also threw two incomplete passes.

“That drive was very important. I kind of blame that on me not finishing up and giving my knees up. We work on that every day and I blame that on me,” Hilton said.

Hilton nearly got the Golden Panthers to reach the end zone line earlier in that drive with a 23-yard catch, but got tangled up at the seven yard line.

“I kind of exploded through and I saw a safety and a corner to beat and Greg (Ellingson) picked up the safety, so I tried to get there real fast and he hit my leg and I tripped,” said Hilton.

Hilton, who normally takes the snaps in the wildcat formation, was comfortable with not getting the call at wildcat in the redzone on third and fourth down.

“Coach felt that Times could get in and I was 100 percent behind him and I felt good about it too,” Hilton said.

Hilton lead all receivers with 124 yards receiving and was honored Shula Bowl IX team M.V.P.

FOOTBALL, page 3

The individual accolades did not make Hilton happy, especially coming off a loss in a rivalry game.

“I don’t think I deserve MVP right now,” Hilton said.

Carroll had a game to forget.

The junior finished out the game completing 20 passes out of 32 attempts for 210 yards. Three out of Carroll’s last four passes late in the game went for a pick. Carroll’s offense was held without a touchdown for the first time this season.

SHULA BOWL, page 3

that resulted in a combined five turnovers by both teams, a messy end to an ugly game for the Golden Panthers.

Now the road for FIU becomes much more treacherous, much more challenging, and much more demanding.

It is very likely that this game will be one that Mario Cristobal and his men look back on when the season comes to a close. There is a strong possibility that this could end up being the deal-breaker for the Golden Panthers, a mental setback that drains the team of life with five games remaining.

Will this be a season-altering defeat? A game that hinders the Golden Panthers beyond repair? Or will they overcome this defeat and make that run that so many believed they may have been capable of heading into this game?

There is no real answer yet. Whatever fate the Golden Panthers are destined for still rests in their own hands.

The real mystery is which Golden Panthers team will show up the rest of the season: the one that appeared to be improving by the week or the one that got manhandled by FAU.

FOOTBALL, page 3

BASKETBALL

Team hosts open preview

With the basketball team’s season beginning on Nov. 12 with at home vs. Florida Memorial, the team took the time to tease fans on the upcoming season with an open preview on Oct. 27.

Fans that went to the US Century Bank Arena had the chance to check out the team in action as well as improvements done on the arena in the form of a new locker room and a place where the team can study film on plays.

Fans were also able to ask Head Coach Isaiah Thomas questions in an open Q&A session on matters related to the team.

Thomas hopes the team goes farther than just winning the Sun Belt Conference.

“We have one goal, and that’s to advance in March. In March, they pick the 64 best teams. We want to be one of those teams,” said Thomas. “So, we want to go to the dance. That’s all we want, to go to the dance. That’s the only goal we have. If we win the conference, that’s great, but at the end of the day, we want to be dancing in March.”

For more on this story including video, please visit fiusm.com
Students look to avoid failing by staying dry

NATALIE LEVY
Staff Writer

After the failed test launch of their first pair of “boat shoes,” Frank Alonso and Brandon Martinez came back in full force to rebuild and re-test before the November third deadline.

The Event: Prof Jaime Canaves’ Materials and Methods Walk on Water Assignment.

The Goal: Walk three-quarters of the way across the FIU Green Library Lake without falling with only the aid of special, student built shoes in the shortest amount of time.

The Grand Prize: $500 and ten extra points towards the next exam.

The Downside: If your shoes don’t cut it, you receive a failing grade (equivalent to one exam grade).

“We built the first shoes and um… They didn’t work. So we’re testing out the new ones now. We’ll probably have to make more revisions,” explained Martinez, a sophomore, and the one in charge of walking for the pair.

“The first ones weren’t long enough. They were buoyant, but too buoyant. I ended up jumping in and swimming for about half an hour.”

His partner, Frank Alonso, added, “They were lighter than they were supposed to be. He fell about 4 or 5 times. And the life jacket was too small.”

The Walk on Water race is an annual assignment aimed at getting students to focus on real world issues such as functionality, creativity, aesthetics, craftsmanship and economics.

“The event has been going on for nearly two decades, concocted by architecture professor Jaime Canaves. In previous years it was more strict, only a certain amount of particular materials could be used. This year the rules are a little more relaxed,” said Alonso.

“We do have a surprise as far as our shoes are going to look. Part of the creativity process for us involves a theme. I don’t want to give it away, but it has to do with homecoming week,” added Martinez.

Even though this is an annual event that has been taking place for the last two decades, assigned to students every year as part of Prof. Jaime Canaves’ Materials and Methods course, the shell shock never lessens. In addition to the grueling schedule architecture students are faced with, including studio classes, they still have to find the time to add this very large project to the rest of their workload.

“It was daunting,” said Martinez.

“We’ve known about it since Design 1 [an introductory architecture course] but we didn’t know what to expect, nor did we know if it would work at all. It’s not something he would do with the money Martinez quipped. “Pay off my credit.”

So what else did the guys learn?

“It is very hard to walk on water, testing is key, and if you fall once you’re probably going to fall 3 more times, so just don’t fall.”

If you ever watched the Rachel Zoe Project on Bravo, you’d see how the tiny stylist brought the classic staple back to modern fashion. Afraid of what extremists might do to her, she opts for faux fur.

Designers are now incorporating fur into all their winter designs. It’s popped up on bomber jackets in the past, but this season’s trends are tying them into the military style.

Retailers like Forever 21, Urban Outfitters and Nordstrom have begun carrying faux fur pieces at an affordable price. The other day I found a fur vest at Forever 21 for just under $40.

The quality is horrible so I’d dish out an extra $50 for the Urban Outfitters version. It looks more like the real thing and the styles aren’t so outrageous.

My favorite way to wear fur is for a night out. Get a fur shawl and throw it over a tiny black party dress and you’ll be the picture of glamour.

Fiction Finds is a weekly fashion column. Find it every Monday. Reviewers do not receive free goods or compensation for favorable reviews.

Architects students Brandon Martinez and Frank Alonso retesting their “boat shoes” for the Walk on Water event.

Students look to avoid failing by staying dry

NATALIE LEVY
Staff Writer

After the failed test launch of their first pair of “boat shoes,” Frank Alonso and Brandon Martinez came back in full force to rebuild and re-test before the November third deadline.

The Event: Prof Jaime Canaves’ Materials and Methods Walk on Water Assignment.

The Goal: Walk three-quarters of the way across the FIU Green Library Lake without falling with only the aid of special, student built shoes in the shortest amount of time.

The Grand Prize: $500 and ten extra points towards the next exam.

The Downside: If your shoes don’t cut it, you receive a failing grade (equivalent to one exam grade).

“We built the first shoes and um… They didn’t work. So we’re testing out the new ones now. We’ll probably have to make more revisions,” explained Martinez, a sophomore, and the one in charge of walking for the pair.

“The first ones weren’t long enough. They were buoyant, but too buoyant. I ended up jumping in and swimming for about half an hour.”

His partner, Frank Alonso, added, “They were lighter than they were supposed to be. He fell about 4 or 5 times. And the life jacket was too small.”

The Walk on Water race is an annual assignment aimed at getting students to focus on real world issues such as functionality, creativity, aesthetics, craftsmanship and economics.

“The event has been going on for nearly two decades, concocted by architecture professor Jaime Canaves. In previous years it was more strict, only a certain amount of particular materials could be used. This year the rules are a little more relaxed,” said Alonso.

“We do have a surprise as far as our shoes are going to look. Part of the creativity process for us involves a theme. I don’t want to give it away, but it has to do with homecoming week,” added Martinez.

Even though this is an annual event that has been taking place for the last two decades, assigned to students every year as part of Prof. Jaime Canaves’ Materials and Methods course, the shell shock never lessens. In addition to the grueling schedule architecture students are faced with, including studio classes, they still have to find the time to add this very large project to the rest of their workload.

“It was daunting,” said Martinez.

“We’ve known about it since Design 1 [an introductory architecture course] but we didn’t know what to expect, nor did we know if it would work at all. It’s not something he would do with the money Martinez quipped. “Pay off my credit.”

So what else did the guys learn?

“It is very hard to walk on water, testing is key, and if you fall once you’re probably going to fall 3 more times, so just don’t fall.”

If you ever watched the Rachel Zoe Project on Bravo, you’d see how the tiny stylist brought the classic staple back to modern fashion. Afraid of what extremists might do to her, she opts for faux fur.

Designers are now incorporating fur into all their winter designs. It’s popped up on bomber jackets in the past, but this season’s trends are tying them into the military style.

Retailers like Forever 21, Urban Outfitters and Nordstrom have begun carrying faux fur pieces at an affordable price. The other day I found a fur vest at Forever 21 for just under $40.

The quality is horrible so I’d dish out an extra $50 for the Urban Outfitters version. It looks more like the real thing and the styles aren’t so outrageous.

My favorite way to wear fur is for a night out. Get a fur shawl and throw it over a tiny black party dress and you’ll be the picture of glamour.

Fiction Finds is a weekly fashion column. Find it every Monday. Reviewers do not receive free goods or compensation for favorable reviews.

Architects students Brandon Martinez and Frank Alonso retesting their “boat shoes” for the Walk on Water event.

Students look to avoid failing by staying dry

NATALIE LEVY
Staff Writer

After the failed test launch of their first pair of “boat shoes,” Frank Alonso and Brandon Martinez came back in full force to rebuild and re-test before the November third deadline.

The Event: Prof Jaime Canaves’ Materials and Methods Walk on Water Assignment.

The Goal: Walk three-quarters of the way across the FIU Green Library Lake without falling with only the aid of special, student built shoes in the shortest amount of time.

The Grand Prize: $500 and ten extra points towards the next exam.

The Downside: If your shoes don’t cut it, you receive a failing grade (equivalent to one exam grade).

“We built the first shoes and um… They didn’t work. So we’re testing out the new ones now. We’ll probably have to make more revisions,” explained Martinez, a sophomore, and the one in charge of walking for the pair.

“The first ones weren’t long enough. They were buoyant, but too buoyant. I ended up jumping in and swimming for about half an hour.”

His partner, Frank Alonso, added, “They were lighter than they were supposed to be. He fell about 4 or 5 times. And the life jacket was too small.”

The Walk on Water race is an annual assignment aimed at getting students to focus on real world issues such as functionality, creativity, aesthetics, craftsmanship and economics.

“The event has been going on for nearly two decades, concocted by architecture professor Jaime Canaves. In previous years it was more strict, only a certain amount of particular materials could be used. This year the rules are a little more relaxed,” said Alonso.

“We do have a surprise as far as our shoes are going to look. Part of the creativity process for us involves a theme. I don’t want to give it away, but it has to do with homecoming week,” added Martinez.

Even though this is an annual event that has been taking place for the last two decades, assigned to students every year as part of Prof. Jaime Canaves’ Materials and Methods course, the shell shock never lessens. In addition to the grueling schedule architecture students are faced with, including studio classes, they still have to find the time to add this very large project to the rest of their workload.

“It was daunting,” said Martinez.

“We’ve known about it since Design 1 [an introductory architecture course] but we didn’t know what to expect, nor did we know if it would work at all. It’s not something he would do with the money Martinez quipped. “Pay off my credit.”

So what else did the guys learn?

“It is very hard to walk on water, testing is key, and if you fall once you’re probably going to fall 3 more times, so just don’t fall.”

If you ever watched the Rachel Zoe Project on Bravo, you’d see how the tiny stylist brought the classic staple back to modern fashion. Afraid of what extremists might do to her, she opts for faux fur.

Designers are now incorporating fur into all their winter designs. It’s popped up on bomber jackets in the past, but this season’s trends are tying them into the military style.

Retailers like Forever 21, Urban Outfitters and Nordstrom have begun carrying faux fur pieces at an affordable price. The other day I found a fur vest at Forever 21 for just under $40.

The quality is horrible so I’d dish out an extra $50 for the Urban Outfitters version. It looks more like the real thing and the styles aren’t so outrageous.

My favorite way to wear fur is for a night out. Get a fur shawl and throw it over a tiny black party dress and you’ll be the picture of glamour.

Fiction Finds is a weekly fashion column. Find it every Monday. Reviewers do not receive free goods or compensation for favorable reviews.

Architects students Brandon Martinez and Frank Alonso retesting their “boat shoes” for the Walk on Water event.
Comedians take the stage for homecoming week

ALEX MACIEL
Contributing Writer

Are you feeling down, overwhelmed, or stressed? You know what they say, laughter is the best medicine.

The event, held on Nov. 1, will take place at the U.S. Century Bank Arena, on the Modesto Maidique Campus. This year’s Panther Prowl is proud to put on. This year’s Panther Prowl Comedy Show will consist of a line up of three well-known comedians. These popular performers include DL Hughley, Kyle Dunnigan, and Iliza Shlesinger.

Florida International University has put on this event year after year, leading up to the Homecoming Game. The lineup is possible due to the help of SGA, The Homecoming Counsel, and Campus Life. After the review of many student surveys and preference, the Board and Directors join to help the selection of these comedians.

Kia Nydam, a general member of SPC, assures that it’s the student’s choice, when it comes to the selection of these comedians. The Homecoming Counsel, and Campus Life. After the review of many student surveys and preference, the Board and Directors join to help the selection of these comedians. Last year’s comedy show featured Craig Robinson, best known as Darryl from the award-winning comedy, The Office. Last year’s show was sold out, resulting in organizers making accommodations for 4200 people instead of last year’s 3500.

Alex Parayuelos, the overall director of the homecoming Counsel, hopes to see a line up of three well-known comedians. These popular performers include DL Hughley, Kyle Dunnigan, and Iliza Shlesinger.

Hughley, Kyle Dunnigan, and Iliza Shlesinger. It is a fun way to show pride and become more involved. Be sure to get your tickets, because it has been known to sell out.

All of these panther proud performers are available to see with a valid ticket. Tickets are free, and are required for admission. Doors open at 7 pm and the show starts at 8 pm. A total of one ticket per Panther ID is permitted and they can be picked up at Campus Life located in GC 2240 starting October 12th from 10 am to 5 pm.

Iliza Shlesinger is best known as the title winner of Last Comic Standing, season six. She has also been featured on Comedy Central’s Late At Gotham, Showtime’s Family Shore & Friends, The Soup, and Byron Allen’s Comics Unleashed.

Event organizers believe the comedy show is a great way to show school spirit, and support for Panther Prowl.

Stephanie Suarez, a chair on the Homecoming Council, agrees “the comedy show is an important event, leading up to the homecoming game.”

It is a fun way to show pride and become more involved. Be sure to get your tickets, because it has been known to sell out.

All of these panther proud performers are available to see with a valid ticket. Tickets are free, and are required for admission. Doors open at 7 pm and the show starts at 8 pm. A total of one ticket per Panther ID is permitted and they can be picked up at Campus Life located in GC 2240 starting October 12th from 10 am to 5 pm.

Iliza Shlesinger is best known as the title winner of Last Comic Standing, season six. She has also been featured on Comedy Central’s Late At Gotham, Showtime’s Family Shore & Friends, The Soup, and Byron Allen’s Comics Unleashed.

Event organizers believe the comedy show is a great way to show school spirit, and support for Panther Prowl.

Stephanie Suarez, a chair on the Homecoming Council, agrees “the comedy show is an important event, leading up to the homecoming game.”

It is a fun way to show pride and become more involved. Be sure to get your tickets, because it has been known to sell out.

All of these panther proud performers are available to see with a valid ticket. Tickets are free, and are required for admission. Doors open at 7 pm and the show starts at 8 pm. A total of one ticket per Panther ID is permitted and they can be picked up at Campus Life located in GC 2240 starting October 12th from 10 am to 5 pm.

Iliza Shlesinger is best known as the title winner of Last Comic Standing, season six. She has also been featured on Comedy Central’s Late At Gotham, Showtime’s Family Shore & Friends, The Soup, and Byron Allen’s Comics Unleashed.

Event organizers believe the comedy show is a great way to show school spirit, and support for Panther Prowl.

Stephanie Suarez, a chair on the Homecoming Council, agrees “the comedy show is an important event, leading up to the homecoming game.”

It is a fun way to show pride and become more involved. Be sure to get your tickets, because it has been known to sell out.

All of these panther proud performers are available to see with a valid ticket. Tickets are free, and are required for admission. Doors open at 7 pm and the show starts at 8 pm. A total of one ticket per Panther ID is permitted and they can be picked up at Campus Life located in GC 2240 starting October 12th from 10 am to 5 pm.

Iliza Shlesinger is best known as the title winner of Last Comic Standing, season six. She has also been featured on Comedy Central’s Late At Gotham, Showtime’s Family Shore & Friends, The Soup, and Byron Allen’s Comics Unleashed.

Event organizers believe the comedy show is a great way to show school spirit, and support for Panther Prowl.

Stephanie Suarez, a chair on the Homecoming Council, agrees “the comedy show is an important event, leading up to the homecoming game.”

It is a fun way to show pride and become more involved. Be sure to get your tickets, because it has been known to sell out.

All of these panther proud performers are available to see with a valid ticket. Tickets are free, and are required for admission. Doors open at 7 pm and the show starts at 8 pm. A total of one ticket per Panther ID is permitted and they can be picked up at Campus Life located in GC 2240 starting October 12th from 10 am to 5 pm.

Iliza Shlesinger is best known as the title winner of Last Comic Standing, season six. She has also been featured on Comedy Central’s Late At Gotham, Showtime’s Family Shore & Friends, The Soup, and Byron Allen’s Comics Unleashed.

Event organizers believe the comedy show is a great way to show school spirit, and support for Panther Prowl.

Stephanie Suarez, a chair on the Homecoming Council, agrees “the comedy show is an important event, leading up to the homecoming game.”

It is a fun way to show pride and become more involved. Be sure to get your tickets, because it has been known to sell out.

All of these panther proud performers are available to see with a valid ticket. Tickets are free, and are required for admission. Doors open at 7 pm and the show starts at 8 pm. A total of one ticket per Panther ID is permitted and they can be picked up at Campus Life located in GC 2240 starting October 12th from 10 am to 5 pm.
Politicians need to present solutions

GIOVANNI GONZALEZ
Staff Writer

With the midterm elections drawing closer, it is currently a particularly important time to gather as much information about candidates and vote. As many as 98 seats are “in play” for deciding what party will take the House of Representatives, which is currently held by the Democrats. Many claim Congress did its job successfully, but what will the voters be looking for in their next choice? With many of the campaigns are being funded by lobbyists and corporate interests, much more difficult to be taken advantage of in our elections.

Candidates have to make an informed decision. They have to let the people know how they are going to make a difference by engaging in serious debates and presenting new ideas while showing they are qualified for the jobs ahead of them.

As voters, we deserve to know who is behind the advertisement; this will allow us to understand the ulterior motives of the supporter.

Without knowing the identity of the company or union behind a particular advertising campaign, we will be missing an important fact - the benefit the supporter expects for the campaign they are supporting. As voters, we deserve to know who is behind the advertisement; this will allow us to understand the ulterior motives of the supporter.

In recent debates, Craig Porter seemed short $1.50 where wealthy Americans would theoretically spend the extra money they saved from the tax breaks. The huge overpending of the stimulus plan was another attempt to boost the economy. Neither of these plans had any economic effect on moving us towards a recovery.

The fact that Student Government Council at Modesto Maidique Campus Comptroller Maria-Rosa Blanco continues to keep a job for which she has not been present for all semester is completely unacceptable. Recently, the SGC-MMC senate conducted a trial to determine whether or not Blanco was guilty of violating all attendance statutes, not being able to sign off on appropriations and failing to deliver reports to the finance committee. SGC-MMC still could not remove her from the position of comptroller. Instead, they are positioned to censure her on Monday.

The act of censuring is merely an on-the-record reprimand that can be issued by an authorized body. Censuring Blanco is not only a mere slap on the wrist, but it fails to deal with the issue that has been raised. SGC-MMC failure to bring a statement and this course of action sets a bad precedent for this governing body when facing problems concerning incompetence at the executive level. It sends a message that punishment will not be exerted upon those who fail to live up to the expectations of important positions in student government.

Moreover, by not removing her from her position and replacing her with someone who is willing to learn and fulfill the position’s responsibilities, SGC-MMC's financial arm will continue to be inefficient and will accomplish its tasks through various loopholes and gray areas.

During the trial, SGC-MMC Vice President Nick Autillo argued that finding someone new and training them would take too long and that by the time that occurred, Blanco would have returned. Blanco’s return to the University is irrelevant. She is guilty of her charges and should be removed. Just because she’ll be back soon doesn’t dismiss her absence for an entire semester.

During the meeting, Autillo stated removing her would have reflected poorly upon the governing body, making it appear that SGC-MMC does not care about online students. This would not be the case since the majority of SGC-MMC senator are students having an effect change in New York, with only one online FIU class.

Furthermore, if SGC-MMC were really concerned about how online students are represented, they would actually represent them. Currently, there are no provisions for online students in Student Government.

Ultimately, the fact that Blanco will return to Miami and the University in December does not excuse the fact that she has been absent the entire fall semester. This should not be the reason used to argue that she should keep her position, and to say that it would be a lengthy process to find and train someone new is a lazy excuse.

The comptroller oversees millions of dollars worth of student funds, which requires a certain proximity to students. In the summer, the executive branch was away from Miami and had no interaction with students or the Student Government in New York and should have either appointed a deputy comptroller or nominated someone else for the position. Instead, they continue to defend her with rhetoric, rightfully so considering she is not even here to defend herself.

The senate was correct to impeach Blanco. For months, students have been without a comptroller. By going no further than a censure, the senate might as well have done nothing at all.

The well-being of our customers is our highest priority and we are looking into this matter.

As voters, we deserve to know who is behind the advertisement; this will allow us to understand the ulterior motives of the supporter.

The rule setting aside corporate spending limits in elections and paved the way for a flood of corporate money into this year’s campaigns. Essentially, this means that unlimited corporate and institutional spending can go on without the identity of the sources revealed.

I believe the right to say and support whom we want to represent us is fundamental; however, I also believe that we need to let voters know who is providing the support. We need to know who is behind the advertisement; this will allow us to understand the ulterior motives of the supporter.

In recent debates, Craig Porter seemed short $1.50.

As voters, we deserve to know who is behind the advertisement; this will allow us to understand the ulterior motives of the supporter.

The rule setting aside corporate spending limits in elections and paved the way for a flood of corporate money into this year’s campaigns. Essentially, this means that unlimited corporate and institutional spending can go on without the identity of the sources revealed.

I believe the right to say and support whom we want to represent us is fundamental; however, I also believe that we need to let voters know who is providing the support. We need to know who is behind the advertisement; this will allow us to understand the ulterior motives of the supporter.

In recent debates, Craig Porter seemed short $1.50.
DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

DomRep on watch for cholera from Haití

A deadly cholera outbreak in Haiti is worrying tourism officials in neighboring Dominican Republic and prompting sanitary scans of airports to beef up sanitation measures, officials said on Oct. 24.

HOSPITALITY AND TOURISM MANAGEMENT

New dean will start in Spring 2010

Carolyne Vergara  Contributing Writer

After over a year of searching for a new dean, the School of Hospitality and Tourism Management finally found one this October.

Mike Hampton will start his term as dean at the start of spring semester in January. He served as dean of hospitality management at Lynn University in Boca Raton since 2005.

Hampton beat out several other candidates including hospitality’s Interim Dean Joan Remington, who was the University’s associate dean of the school of hospitality before Joseph West resigned from his tenure as dean in 2009.

No stranger to the education world, Hampton’s degrees include a Bachelor of Science in Business Management from Florida State University, a Masters of Science in Hospitality Management from the University and an Educational Doctorate in adult education and human resources development also from the University.

Hampton was a faculty member of the University’s school of hospitality management for 12 years. He was an adjunct professor from 1984 through 1987 and full-time faculty member from 1993 to 2000.

Hampton has accolades and awards from numerous hospitality associations including: Educational Institute of the American Hotel & Lodging Association, North American Association of Food Equipment Manufacturers and Hospitality Sales & Marketing Association International.

Solid work experience is another of Hampton’s strengths. In 1986 he founded HSA International, a global provider of training, educational and consulting services for the hospitality industry where he still serves as chief executive officer.

He worked in the hospitality industry for over 20 years. He began as a desk clerk for a Holiday Inn while working on his undergraduate degree from FSU.

“I started as a desk clerk and worked my way up to be a senior executive for Host Mark out of Colorado,” Hampton said in an interview with The Beacon. “You have to work your way up.”

At Lynn University where Hampton served as dean for five years, his accomplishments included developing the college’s strategic plan that included creating specializations. They created a master of business administration in sports management, for example.

His last semester as dean at Lynn will involve tying up loose ends for the school’s 2020 strategic plan which charged college to find ways to differentiate themselves.

“We are getting those things at least on a point where I can step away,” Hampton said.

Hampton will continue to serve the University until Hampton begins in January, did her part to keep up the hospitality program’s presence at Biscayne Bay Campus by setting up lectures and events. South Florida Business Journal recognized her as a “Power Leader in Tourism and Hospitality”.

Remington was not available for comment but her assistant Dawn Minniall, program assistant at HTM, offered insight on Remington’s reaction to Hampton’s placement.

“She’s fine with it,” she said during a phone interview. “She really respects [Hampton].”

Hampton’s action plan for his first semester as dean of HTM will mirror University President Mark Rosenberg’s style of leadership.

He plans to hold sit down meetings with everyone from key players to students to develop a “very clear direction.”

“I’m very proud of what we accomplished at Lynn in such a short time,” Hampton said.

“It was really a team effort. I believe everyone can contribute and have something valuable to say.”

However, he chose the University as the place to continue his career.

“IU has more capacity to grow and do more dynamic things than Lynn. [This University’s] school of hospitality management is very well respected worldwide and there’s huge potential for growth and expansion to prominence in the international arena.”

VENEZUELA

Business leaders briefly kidnapped

Venezuela’s government promised to investigate a violent attack on four representatives of the country’s largest business chamber, a group that has often been at odds with President Hugo Chávez.

U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS

Judge dismisses case against ATF agent

William Clarke, a federal agent accused of killing Marcus Sukow, walked out of court a free man after a judge threw out the case on a technicality, proper procedure wasn’t followed in identifying Sukow’s body.

TUESDAY TIMES ROUND TABLE

Students’ impact on sweatshops discussed this week’s roundtable

Jessica Padilla  Contributing Writer

This week’s discussion will explore a sweatshop’s initiative to bring equal rights to workers, especially in the garment industry, which unemployment around the world is already on a steep drop in search of a trend for sweatshops internationally.

Bronwen Bares, assistant director of the Center for Leadership and Service and the Women’s Center at the Biscayne Bay Campus, will host the roundtable topic for this week. Bares will focus on the impact university students have on sweatshops.

The New York Times article Barces chose, “Factory Deeds Sweatshop Label, but Can It Thrive?” was published July 2010 and was written by Steven Greenhouse.

The article discussed one factory’s initiative to improve working conditions and fair labor after numerous appeals from university authorities.

“This is a great example of how the voices of college students can be heard if they choose to use them,” Bares said. “Students who feel passionately about global issues and issues of human rights can take action that can lead to positive change on a global scale.”

Located in the Dominican Republic, the Alta Gracia factory is owned by Knights Apparel, a privately held company in Spartanburg, S.C. According to the College Licensing Company Knights Apparel is the leading supplier of college-logo apparel to American universities.

The factory is an experiment that Joseph Bozich, CEO of Knights Apparel, put together in response to demand from students activists to stop using poverty-wage in sweatshops. The Alta Gracia factory has pledged to pay a living wage to its workers.

Knights Apparel products will have a higher cost but they will be priced so the retailer or the consumer won’t spend too much in order to support these efforts.

By the end of the fall semester, Barnes & Noble plans to have Alta Graça’s T-shirts and sweats at bookstores on 180 campuses and 350 by the Winter.

While Follett, the other giant college bookstores plans to sell the T-shirts on 85 campuses this fall.

This TTR is anticipated to motivate students bring awareness of the issue to their communi-